

Uncertainty Guidances in Science and Public Policy Final program

The workshop sessions are participatory, with a significant number of interventions from participants anticipated, and one of the organizers leading each session. On Monday, we will identify where each of the participants can best speak to their topics of interest and expertise. The overarching goals of the workshop are to identify options for future uncertainty guidances and to forge new research collaborations that can contribute to that. We will have parallel groups working throughout the week on different aspects of uncertainty guidances: these groups will not strive for consensus but for a mapping of alternatives.
