Dear Incoming MSc Student,

A very warm welcome on behalf of all of us in the Department. We look forward to meeting you in person, and hope that your year with us will be an exciting and stimulating one – where you will grow intellectually, make new friends and professional networks, and have a lot of fun.

This year is a particularly exciting one for us because we are expanding our historical specialism in Social Psychology to become the Department of Psychological and Behavioural Science – aiming to become world leaders in advancing understandings of Psychology as both a social and a behavioural science. In addition to being a cutting edge centre of expertise in its own right, the newly expanded department will also work towards positioning itself as a hub for 50+ psychological and behavioural researchers in other disciplines across the LSE.

In addition to welcoming you, the aim of this letter is to bring your attention to preliminary information about your chosen course of study. Over the next two months we will be making information available on our Department website and also encouraging you to join our Psychology@LSE Facebook Network for Offer Holders.

Our website information will consist of contact details for key staff, a list of suggestive readings, information on programme specific Welcome Meetings, and programme handbooks for the academic session 2016-2017.

In the meantime if you have any queries or need our help with any matter concerning your future studies with us do get in touch with either Jacqueline Crane, MSc Programme Administrator (email: j.c.crane@lse.ac.uk), Terri-Ann Fairclough, MPhil/PhD Programme Administrator (email: t.fairclough@lse.ac.uk) or Champa Heidbrink (who is joining us on 1 September, email: c.heidbrink@lse.ac.uk),.

My colleagues and I very much look forward to meeting you in September 2016 at the start of what we hope will be a stimulating, challenging and exciting year.
