SERVING IN THE 21ST CENTURY

JOCELYNE BOURGON, P.C., O.C.

We live in turbulent times. Shocks, crises, cascading failures, surprising breakthroughs and opportunities characterize the world we live in. They result from the growing interdependency and complexity of our global economy and networked societies. They place a premium on governments' ability to anticipate what might be, to prevent what can be, and to help society adapt to what will be. This creates a minefield for public servants trying to steer a country away from shocks and towards prosperity and well-being. This book is dedicated to helping prepare governments to face the challenges of governing in turbulent times.

A New Synthesis of Public Administration builds upon the findings of an international research network involving over 200 senior officials from government, business and academia in six partner countries: Australia, Brazil, Canada, Netherlands, Singapore, and the United Kingdom. It proposes an enabling framework to assist practitioners frame questions, identify options, and explore possible choices and implications. The result is a book that challenges the reader to critically examine the conventional, to explore the possible, and to contemplate a new, more open and dynamic trajectory for the future.
