Report of the Director for 2005-06

Once again, as the financial section below explains in more detail, the School exceeded its financial target. It is important for us to run a surplus, as we have a sizeable investment backlog in relation to our existing estate, which is not of a quality adequate to house a top class global university, and we need more high quality space to sustain our expansion.

The prime reason for the successful financial result is that places in the School are in very high demand, both domestically and internationally. At undergraduate level we receive among the highest numbers of applicants per place of all universities in the United Kingdom, and while domestic demand was a little down in 2006, following the increase last year as students sought to be admitted under the old fee regime, international applications jumped by about 15 per cent.

At postgraduate level, we have some concerns about the number of British students prepared to study for a Masters: that, we believe, is a national problem. But overseas students continue to apply in large numbers, and from a very wide range of countries. We have long recruited students from, for example, Hong Kong and Singapore, but we are now also seeing rising applications from countries like Vietnam, where we are newcomers. And the numbers coming to us from mainland China continue to grow.

Expansion

I reported last year that, in response to this high demand, we plan to expand the School to around 9,000 full time students (from just over 8,000 today) in the next 5 years. To ensure that expansion is properly considered, we have put in place a new planning process whereby individual departments assess the changing demand for their degrees and put forward proposals for the future. We have also consulted university leaders elsewhere, to ensure we remain abreast of new developments in social science teaching and research around the world. As I write, we are assessing the proposals put forward and constructing a coherent and overall strategy for the School over the next 5 years. The Academic Board and the Council will be considering concrete plans (including plans for more concrete) during the course of this academic year.

Some changes are underway already. Following lengthy consideration we launched a new Department of Management in 2006, bringing together 4 previously separate departments (Industrial Relations, Operational Research, Interdisciplinary Institute of Management and Information Systems). It may well be appropriate to add other departments in due course. Our priority is to broaden and strengthen our management education offerings, which have been too narrowly focused hitherto. We have also launched a range of double degree programmes with top class universities elsewhere: Colombia in New York, Sciences Po in Paris and Peking University. Working with these international partners we can offer programmes which it would not be possible for us to teach effectively using only our own faculty in London. Our double degree with Peking University, for example, will allow students to take the LSE's international relations courses in London and to study the rise of China and Chinese foreign policy in Beijing. As I explained last year, we see this as a sustainable international strategy, and one which for us is preferable to opening campuses elsewhere which could only be a pale reflection of our London home.

Fees

The new variable fees regime for domestic and European undergraduates was not introduced until October 2006, after the end of the financial year under review. But during the year we put in place a new bursary scheme, agreed with the Office of Fair Access, to provide financial support for students from poorer families. Entrants from the poorest families will be better off under the new arrangements than they were under the old regime.

There was no obvious sign of a fall of in demand from students from less wealthy families. The proportion of offers made to students from state schools rose in 2006 after 3 years of small reductions. But it is too early to assess the full impact of the regime. The government have promised a review in 2009, to which we and other universities will wish to contribute.

We can certainly expect that students paying somewhat higher fees than before will focus attention on the experience they have at university. Partly for that reason, we have embarked on a set of projects to improve the student experience at LSE. We are looking to enhance support to non-UK students, to develop a student well being strategy, to improve our coordination of feedback from students, and to provide better pastoral support. Many of these projects are still at an early stage, and I will report further on them in the future.

Research

On the research front, the life of many academics in the School has been dominated by the Research Assessment Exercise. Although the deadline by which academics must submit their publications for assessment is not until October 2007, with the long lead time for many refereed journals this year has been an important one. We have been working hard through the School's Research Committee to ensure that we will be in a position to put forward the best possible submission to the various panels set up to assess the quality of research done. But of course every other university is doing the same, so this is a time of competitive stress for academics.

The position has been somewhat confused by statements by the government to the effect that the 2008 RAE will be the last conducted in this way, based on extensive peer assessments. The timing of the government's criticisms of the process underway was somewhat curious, coming as it did 2 years before the conclusion of the current round. The policy proposals emerged initially from the Treasury, rather than the Department for Education and Skills, adding to the perception that left and right hands in Whitehall were not as closely coordinated as they might be.

We can understand the case for change. The existing RAE is very time consuming both for those who submit to it, and for the panels themselves, on some of which we are represented. But we are concerned that a rapid move to an assessment process based on 'metrics', in other words simple measures of citations, could have perverse consequences. Too little attention has been paid so far to the problems of assessment in humanities and the social sciences, where reliable metrics are harder to find. Our Chairman has helpfully made these points in the House of Lords. We shall continue to watch this area of policy closely and to contribute to the national debate.

Management

The internal management structure of the School is not of abiding interest to those outside it, or indeed to some of those within. But this year we did make a significant change which is worthy of note. Following a review of the role of Convenors of academic departments, we decided that the title 'Convenor' should be abolished. It was something of a hangover from a previous age, when the management demands on the individuals concerned were less. In future, there will be Heads of Department, rather than Convenors, a change in designation which reflects the more significant role they now play in managing their parts of the School. Though academic decision making power continues to rest with the Academic Board and its Committees, the Department Heads Forum has assumed an increasingly important role within the School as an environment in which month to month management questions can be discussed.

Fundraising

The School's fundraising campaign had a particularly good year, with around £13 million raised from a wide variety of sources. That is the highest figure we have achieved so far in a single year. Among those important donations were $4 million to endow a new chair in contemporary Turkish studies, provided by a number of sources in Turkey, including the government and the Central Bank. That will sit alongside the Greek chair in the European Institute. We were also delighted to receive a pledge of £2 million to support students from the Middle East and South East Asia, from an alumnus, Arif Naqvi, and his company the Abraaj Group in Dubai.

It was also very pleasing that the Annual Fund, which pulls together unrestricted donations from a large number of alumni giving individually at a modest level, exceeded £500,000 for the first time. We think it is vital to develop a habit of giving among our alumni at an early stage of their careers. Experience in US universities suggests that is the key to long term fundraising success. At present, we remain a long way from the achievements of large American private or indeed public universities, but I am confident that we are moving in the right direction.

The Estate

We made considerable progress in improving the Estate during the year. New classrooms came into use in the towers we purchased in Clements Inn. The new academic building continues to move forward on plan, and now within a fixed price contract. It will be ready for the 2008/09 academic year. Just as importantly, we have increased our residence places significantly, and upgraded the stock. Two new residences, Lillian Knowles House in Spitalfields and Northumberland House just off Trafalgar Square, were opened in time for the 2006/07 session, and Passfield Hall, beloved of many of our students over the decades, was refurbished, enlarged and re-opened at the same time. We can now offer rooms in residences to 45 per cent of our students.

In the Old Building itself, one small improvement this year served to reconnect the School with its early history. In 1910 George Bernard Shaw commissioned a stained glass window from an artist friend to commemorate, and even gently ridicule his fellow Fabian society members. The window shows Fabians, including the Webbs and HG Wells, in Elizabethan costume, hammering the globe into shape with the motto 'pray devoutly, hammer stoutly'. For many years the window was installed in the Webb's house in Dorking, but when that house was sold it disappeared from view, and resurfaced only recently in a London sale room. The Webb Society bought it, but then offered it to the School for display and safe keeping.

We are delighted to have been able to install it in the Shaw library, next to the splendid Nicholson portrait of the Webbs themselves. And just as Attlee had done before him in Dorking, Tony Blair visited the School to unveil it. We are most grateful to the Webb Society for the loan.

University of London

In other respects, the School is moving away from its roots. We have decided to seek to exercise the degree awarding powers which were given to us last year, following an in-depth review of our quality assurance methods by the Government's Quality Assurance Agency. Many of our students are now surprised to find themselves given a University of London certificate on their graduation day. We have therefore decided that it would be better for LSE to issue degrees in its own name in future. We await approval from the University of London as a whole to that proposal.

Imperial College has chosen to go further, and to secede from the federal university altogether. Our view at present is that would not be the right course for LSE. Some of our faculty and students make more use of the university central facilities than did those of Imperial College. But we are looking for further improvements for the governance of the University of London, and in its cost control, and we keep the position under review.

Financial overview

For the financial year ending 31 July 2006 the School achieved a surplus before exceptional items of £13.7m, equivalent to 9.2 per cent of gross income and compares to a surplus of £10.1m for 2004/05 (7.5 per cent).

During the year the School liquidated its fixed asset investments and received a partial settlement relating to participation in the external programme of the University of London. These two items generated exceptional income of £2.2m bringing the total reported surplus for the year to £15.9m. In addition to these exceptional items, buoyant student recruitment, contingencies not required and lags in staff recruitment all contributed to the surplus. Surpluses are expected to decline within target range for the next few years.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee has adopted a target surplus range of 3 per cent to 4 per cent of income, recognising that sustainable surplus is required to fund loan repayments, to support capital and infrastructure investment and provide the School with the flexibility to invest in new academic initiatives.

Consolidated Income and Expenditure

The gross income of the School and its subsidiaries increased 10.5 per cent to £149m (2004/05 £135m). Major contributions to this growth were a 14 per cent increase in tuition fee income and a 9 per cent increase in HEFCE grants. The School's tuition fee income of £72m (2004/05 £63m) remains the most important source of income, representing 48 per cent of the total.

Non-UK/EU (overseas) students account for half the School's student population and for over two-thirds of tuition fee income. This highlights the international flavour of the School's student body and it is a testament to the School's reputation that despite the tragic events of 7 July 2005 student recruitment, particularly from overseas, remained buoyant.

Turning to expenditure, non-pay spending grew by almost 11 per cent, though in many instances this is less than the growth in the related income. For example, the significant increase in academic department spending comes from growth in the London summer school, some new short courses and the cost of teaching to support the additional student recruitment in the year.

It is particularly pleasing to note that scholarship and bursary spending has grown by 15 per cent to £9.1m: this now represents nearly 14 per cent of tuition fee income. This level is amongst the highest in the sector and will rise further from 2006/07 with the introduction of the new bursary scheme that supports variable undergraduate home/EU tuition fees.

The 7 per cent increase in average pay, well above cost of living award for 2005/06, reflects the School's continuing commitment to investment in staff. Although presenting a constant challenge in the competitive global market from which the School seeks to draw its faculty, the recruitment and retention of the best academics is critical to the School's continuing success. I am particularly pleased that the School has attracted staff of international reputation to the newly formed Department of Management.

Liquidity and financing

The net cash flow from operating activities rose to £21.8m compared to £13.4m in 2004/05. This significant inflow of cash, combined with the proceeds from the sale of fixed assets investments, has permitted the financing of capital expenditure and repayment of the finance leases on High Holborn residence without drawdown of additional borrowings during the year.

Capital Expenditure

The School has undertaken 3 major capital projects during the year: the development of the New Academic Building at 24 Kingsway, the refurbishment of Passfield hall of residence and the refurbishment of Towers 1 and 2 in Clement's Inn.

Following a successful architectural competition Grimshaws were selected to lead the redevelopment of 24 Kingsway, the former Public Trustees Office which was acquired last year for £18m. The development, costing £63m in total, is scheduled for completion in summer 2008 and will provide a major new academic building exceeding 12,000 sq metres in size. It will offer high quality accommodation for staff and students that will be fully accessible to disabled users and is built to a high standard of environmental sustainability. To date the School has funded the development from reserves, fundraising and HEFCE capital grants.

Funding Council Grants

Although the School has a relatively low proportion of HEFCE grant funding, the £26.5m received together with £0.4m from the Joint Information and Infrastructure Systems Committee (JISC) is an essential contribution to the finances of the School.

Research Income

There has been a fall in the number and value of awards from UK Government, UK Industry and Commerce and UK Charities, as several large programmes and grants came to an end in 2005. However, as in previous years, there has been an increase in income from UK Research Councils and European Government funding (14 per cent and 25 per cent respectively), demonstrating that the School remains extremely competitive in securing grants awarded on a peer reviewed basis.

Enterprise LSE limited and subsidiary

Enterprise LSE Ltd, and its subsidiary Enterprise LSE Cities Ltd, is the wholly owned subsidiary of the School that exists to exploit the potential for consultancy and related activities that the School's world-class faculty offer. 2005/06 has been a particularly successful year that has seen strong growth in both consultancy work and executive education. Turnover has increased by 64 per cent to £4.5m generating a net profit of £1.3m that is paid through Gift Aid to the School to support teaching and research activities.

The growth in consultancy business is particularly welcome as it provides an important opportunity for faculty to supplement their personal income, a useful mechanism for attracting and retaining key staff.

Corporate Social Responsibility

The School's greatest contributions to society arise from its fundamental outputs – research and teaching. But the School's corporate social responsibility activities encompass a very wide range of activities from local to global. It is only possible to give a few examples here.

Contribution to Public Policy: Academic staff contribute not only through their work, but through membership of and as advisors to public bodies. Administrative and support staff are active in sector wide bodies.

Scholarships: The School has offered over £9m of scholarships, bursaries and hardship funds in 2005/06, of which more than £7m came from its own funds, with the balance from donations and endowments.

Environment: The School adopted an environment policy in April 2005. It is a member of the Carbon Trust's Higher Education Carbon Management Programme. An innovative re-use scheme has diverted 6 tons of landfill to re-use, including mattresses to local charities and text books to Rwanda. The New Academic Building is being developed to a BREAM 'excellent' rating – the highest environmental standard. The Environment Policy is incorporated in the School's purchasing tender procedures.

Local Community: The School operates a 'volunteer 4 all' scheme for staff to contribute to local community activities. 'Portugal Prints', an independent charity for people with learning difficulties is hosted in the School's Parish Hall. Many students contribute to widening participation activities in local Schools.

Debate: The School has an unparalleled programme of events with speakers of international renown. Most of these are open to members of the public.

The Future

Like all universities, the LSE faces a number of challenges: recruiting top faculty, attracting excellent students and sustaining an environment in which reflection and analysis can prosper, while responding to commercial pressures. I am confident that the LSE is well-placed to prosper in this environment.
