Report of the Director for 2008-09

In last year's annual report I ended by drawing attention to the difficult economic situation and to the threats to universities' finances posed by the recession, which at that time was in its early stages. I noted that universities were bound to be affected by the downturn in a number of ways, through the impact on their investments, through a tightening of public expenditure (in due course) and perhaps through an impact on student demand and the ability of students and their families to afford higher education, and particularly post-graduate studies.

Since then, the economy has deteriorated further, and while there are signs of recovery in Asia and continental Europe, the UK remains in recession. It is also clear that, in the medium term, government funding to universities, and indeed to the rest of the public sector, is going to be cut back. But it is fair to say that so far, LSE has been less badly affected than many other universities. For us, student demand remains strong, both at home and overseas. Our Executive Education programmes have held up well, as have vacation bookings in our residences, an important source of income for the School. Fundraising has been more difficult, however. While the Annual Fund, the aggregation of many small donations to the School, continues to do well and to grow year on year, it has been more difficult to attract larger donations over the last year.

Overall, however, LSE has remained on an even keel in financial terms. Our end of year result, explained in detail later, is still very positive. The surplus is not as large as it was last year, but is comfortably above the Funding Council guideline, which suggests that we should aim for a surplus of between three and four percent of turnover. We have achieved a result as least as positive as that for the last five years.

Looking forward, the prospect is not so easy. We have already suffered a significant cut in research funding, even though we did very well in the Government's research assessment exercise. And there must be a strong possibility that both teaching and research grants will be cut back further in the future. Also, we have benefited in the past from steady growth in student numbers. Continued income growth is, of course, a very favourable background against which to plan one's finances. And our income, in most years, has typically grown by a little more than our expenditure. But as I explained last year, we do not plan to grow student numbers further in the medium term. Our Council has confirmed a ceiling of nine-thousand full-time students for 2012, and we are already very close to that ceiling. So in future we will not be able to rely on volume growth to create buoyancy in our income.

We have reviewed that decision over the last year and remain confident that it is the right approach to take. It is prudent in the light of the economic situation, where we cannot assume that student demand will remain as buoyant in the future as it has been in the past. There has been a short term boost in demand for graduate courses as the job market has been difficult, but that may well turn out to be a temporary phenomenon. More important, for LSE in particular, there are signs that during a period of quite rapid growth in student numbers we allowed student satisfaction to slip back a little. So our current focus is on improving student satisfaction and on enhancing the quality of the teaching we provide. The recommendations of the Teaching Task Force under Professor Janet Hartley have been taken forward over the last year. We have recruited more teaching staff in order to reduce class sizes. That investment has not yet been reflected in the form of improvement in student satisfaction, but we hope it will be over the next couple of years.

In other areas, however, we shall need to be careful with our expenditure. We have looked hard at the plans for non-academic departments in particular over the next years and cut back on some planned increases in spending. We have also re-phased the planned investments in our facilities. We can continue to make progress in improving the estate, and the New Student Centre building is moving ahead as planned, but there are other areas where we may need to defer investment a little. On the other hand, the sharp fall in commercial property prices in London, driven by recessionary conditions, has allowed us to acquire a couple of new properties within the envelope of our estate, which will provide us with much needed elbow room as we redevelop the centre of the campus in the next few years. We have bought Sardinia House on Sardinia Street, and the White Horse Pub which completes our ownership of the Island Site, as we know it, and therefore gives us much needed additional flexibility for the further development of that site in the future.

As far as the estate is concerned, over the last year the most important new development was the opening of the New Academic Building, foreshadowed in last year's report. We were delighted that Her Majesty the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh agreed to perform the opening ceremony on 5 November. That went well, and more importantly, the building has very soon become an indispensable part of our facilities, with a large number of classes and lectures taking place in its excellent rooms and theatres. We carried out a building satisfaction survey among those who have their offices there, in both the Management and Law Departments, after six months of occupancy. I am pleased to say that the level of satisfaction with the new building was very high.

On the academic front, the most important event of the year for our faculty was the publication of the results of the government's research assessment exercise in December 2008. The last RAE was completed seven years earlier. In quality terms we were delighted with the outcome. Each academic was required to submit four published pieces of work, which were then graded on a scale from one to four stars by panels of peer reviewers. The School's overall grade point average was 2.96, the second highest in the country among multi-faculty institutions. The percentage of four star papers we submitted was the highest in the country overall. Several of our departments were ranked number one, including two large disciplines, Law and Economics. And our economists had the highest grade point average of any discipline in any university in the country.

We could hardly have done much better in terms of our submission. Yet, as I have already mentioned, the surprising outcome was that our research grant from the Funding Council was cut by just over 13 per cent, or about £2.6 million. And that was against an overall increase in government research funding of almost eight percent. What drove this counterintuitive outcome? To simplify a little, two factors were at work. First, since on this occasion, unlike the last, the rankings were created on the basis of assessments of individuals' contributions, rather than a ranking of whole departments, it was inevitable that the funding on offer would be spread to a larger number of universities than before. There are small pockets of excellence around the country, which the Funding Council has rewarded this time. But the second factor, which interacted with the first, is that the Funding Council, no doubt influenced by policy statements by the Prime Minister and others in government, chose to ring fence funding for STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics). The combination of those two decisions meant that funding to institutions concentrating on the Social Sciences and the Humanities was cut back quite sharply. In London, for example, both SOAS (School of Oriental and African Studies) and the Institute of Education suffered percentage cut backs on a scale comparable to those we experienced.

We have made representations to government, at the highest level, about the inequity of this arrangement, and the risk it poses to the integrity of the research assessment exercise as a whole. The response we have received to these representations has, frankly, been unsympathetic and unsatisfactory. It is clear that we cannot hope for any significant improvement in the position within the next few years, which means we have to find other solutions if we wish to continue to carry out the volume of world class research that we have been able to sustain in the past.

One more encouraging development on the research front came with the opening of a major new initiative called the International Growth Centre which is a partnership with Oxford University, but based at LSE. It amounts to a kind of outsourcing by the Department for International Development for much of their own research on how best to focus their aid programmes to promote economic growth in the poorest countries. It is unusual for an academic centre in that there will be off-shoots in individual countries in Africa and Asia. The first such off-shoot is in operation already in Tanzania. The work will involve academics from LSE and elsewhere. The Secretary for International Development, Douglas Alexander, came to the School in December to open it. We are very pleased by this development, which fits in especially well with our aim of raising the School's profile in Africa, in terms both of research and of student recruitment.

Financial overview

For the financial year ending 31 July 2009 the School achieved a financial surplus for reinvestment of £17.6m, equivalent to 8.7 per cent of gross income, compared to a surplus of £26.7m for 2007/08 (14.1 per cent of gross income). This reduction in overall surplus was planned and reflects a growing level of investment in teaching, research and academic services.

The School's Finance and General Purposes Committee adopted a target surplus range of 3 per cent to 4 per cent of income in 2003, recognizing that a sustainable surplus is required to fund loan repayments, to support capital and infrastructure investment and to provide the School with the flexibility to invest in new academic initiatives.

As I have said the School has achieved surpluses in excess of this level in recent years through a combination of growth in student recruitment, substantial contributions generated from activities that have been developed to achieve full utilization of the School's physical and intellectual assets, and sound budgeting and financial management processes. It is particularly important to note that while student recruitment has been at or above target in recent years the standards of entry requirement have not been lowered, indeed in many cases they have been increased. Over the next few years the School has plans for investment of £200m in capital improvements. This is all aimed at ensuring the School can continue to attract the best faculty and students even in the current economic circumstances and provide them with an excellent environment to study and work.

Income – Total

Gross income grew by 6.8 per cent in total. Tuition fees increased by 5.8 per cent, and now represent 48 per cent of income. There was strong growth in research grants and contracts income (up by 14.1 per cent) and income from other sources grew by 15 per cent. Nearly half the increase relates to the settlement of the School's new VAT partial exemption scheme and related VAT recovery.

Net assets and surplus as % of turnover

Report of the Director for 2008-09

Income

Despite the increasingly uncertain economic outlook, during the year fundraising delivered a net increase in the School's total endowment to £57.4m. Endowment and investment income during 2008/09 fell by 13.4 per cent reflecting lower returns on endowment investments, and on the School's cash balances marginally offset by higher cash balances during the year.

Although reported Funding Council grants fell by 0.5 per cent compared to 2007/08, this is attributable to changes in the income from non-recurrent grants recognized during 2008/09. These figure do not include the £2.6m reduction in QR grant that will affect us from 2010/11. Recurrent HEFCE grants increased by 1.6 per cent, reflecting an increase in the unit of undergraduate funding and a rather smaller increase in the recurrent research grant.

Full-time student numbers 2004/05 – 2008/09

Students

The School had 8,627 full time students in 2008/09, an increase of 92 over the previous year, and slightly ahead of the plan for School expansion to 9,000 full time students by 2012.

Overseas students (those from outside the United Kingdom or other European Union countries) account for roughly half the School's student population and for over two-thirds of tuition fee income, reflecting both the international flavour of the School's student body and our world-wide reputation.

Full-time student 2008/09

Financial support for students

It is especially pleasing to report that over the past five years, through a combination of reinvestment of income and successful fundraising, the School has almost doubled the funds awarded in bursaries, scholarships and awards. In 2008/09 total awards exceeded £12.3m, a 7.5 per cent increase on 2007/08, and they are at a level which is amongst the highest in the UK higher education sector.

Income Funding Council Grants

Although the School has a relatively low proportion of HEFCE (Higher Education Funding Council of England) grant funding compared with most UK higher education institutions, the £28.2m received from HEFCE together with £0.4m from JISC (the Joint Information and Infrastructure Systems Committee) is an essential contribution to the financial viability of the School, as have been the various rounds of SRIF research capital funding. As noted previously the School has been dismayed that despite an extremely successful RAE our research (QR) grant will fall substantially beyond 2009/10. This comes after a number of years where the grant has failed to keep pace with the increasing costs of research or adequately to reflect the costs of operating in central London.

On teaching grant, the continuing disparity between the amount we are paid to teach home and EU undergraduates (the government set tuition fee plus the HEFCE teaching grant) and the cost of delivering the teaching remains a concern for the School.

Income – Halls of Residence

The School operates 3,765 bed spaces in 11 halls of residence and University of London halls. During vacation periods the halls operate on a commercial basis providing hotel accommodation for a wide range of customers, ranging from our own summer school students to casual visitors to London. LSE Lets Limited's £5.2m per annum revenue is generated from this activity and used to subsidise student rents. This enables us to continue to offer many rooms on a 31 contract week basis, in contrast to the commercial providers who have a growing presence in London and require students to contract for 40 weeks or longer.

Residences operate on a 'self financing' basis, with room rents set a level which, after the subsidy from vacation business, are sufficient to cover operating costs, rents and capital charges.

LSE Enterprise Limited and DUKE CE Limited

LSE Enterprise Ltd is the wholly owned arm of the School that exists to develop the potential for consultancy, executive education and related activities that the School's world-class faculty offers.

The company delivers its activities through its two trading operations – LSE Executive Education and LSE Consulting. Projects range from the development of

Full-time student in 2008/09 by continent

Bursaries, awards and scholarships

LSE Enterprise turnover and operating profit

Report of the Director for 2008-09

groups of civil servants from many different countries through structured executive programme teaching to complex interdisciplinary commercial research projects applying academic methodologies to major policy questions. These activities connect academics to senior decision makers as well create opportunities for their research to deliver impact on practitioners and policy.

Other initiatives include the successful joint venture with Duke Corporate Education to supply customised strategy courses to multi-national organisations which has continued to bring in a strong royalty income to the company.

Despite the challenging business environment, 2008/09 has been a very successful year for the company with turnover up by 9.4 per cent and the operating surplus, which will be remitted to the School through Gift Aid, up by 7.1 per cent to £2.0m. The Gift Aid paid to the School supports teaching and research activities and the company also provides an important opportunity for faculty to supplement their income, a useful mechanism for attracting and retaining key staff. In 2008/09 this transfer was worth £1.8m (2007/08 £1.4m) to LSE academics.

2008/09 research funding source

Research Income

Income generated from research contracts grants and endowments continues to grow, increasing by 14 per cent to £20.3m in 2008/09. The UK Research Councils remain the largest funders of research, accounting for a third of the School's overall research income. Income from this source remains stable with a small increase of 3.8 per cent as the initial financial impact of full economic costing support by the Research Councils has now matured. There was a substantial increase of 67 per cent in Government funded research. A number of DfID-sponsored projects began in the period, including the International Growth Centre, accounting for 50 per cent of the increase. There was an increase of 23 per cent in endowment funded research, mainly due to generous donations from Paul Woolley, the Kuwait Foundation and the Grantham Foundation for the Protection of the Environment. The start of several major European Union contracts under the Seventh Framework Programme contributed significantly to the 10 per cent increase from this sponsor category. The 11.5 per cent reduction in research funded from charitable sources is mainly due to the completion of two major projects sponsored by the Joseph Rowntree Foundation and the Leverhulme Trust. Research funded by other external sources increased by 19.8 per cent. Notably new projects were secured from the Alfred Herrhausen Society to support the Urban Age project. Other large awards in this category included funding from Munich Re and the Reserve Bank of India.

Research grants and contracts

Report of the Director for 2008-09

The School's strategy remains to compete successfully for high quality peer reviewed research. Where it is possible and appropriate to our academic aims, we also participate in commercial non-peer reviewed research, though undertaking research of low academic benefit purely for income generation is not a strategic aim.

Expenditure – Total

Total expenditure grew by 13.3 per cent, with pay costs increasing by 12.7 per cent, of which 5.4 per cent was attributable to the pay awards in May and October 2008, 2.7 per cent resulted from promotion and increments, 3.6 per cent from a net increase of 77 staff, with the balance being accounted for by an increase in one-off payments and honoraria. The 5 per cent RPI linked award in October 2008 was significantly higher than expected. Other operating expenditure grew in total by 12.4 per cent, reflecting the growth in research activity, the investment in an offsite IT facility, expanded trading activities and estates refurbishment projects.

Balance sheet and liquidity

During 2008/09 the School's net assets grew by 9.4 per cent and the cash at bank and bank deposits increased to £70.7m. It is noteworthy that this significant overall improvement in liquidity has been achieved during a period of substantial capital investment. Looking to the future, the School has a £65m amortising loan facility of which £35m is currently drawn. The School's Finance and General Purposes Committee reviews borrowing capacity on a regular basis and considers it adequate to accommodate our medium term capital investment plans.

Endowments and fundraising

During 2008/09 the School received £8.1m in new endowments. A significant proportion of this arises from the fulfilment of pledges made by donors in previous years. The current challenge for the School is how to renew this 'pipeline' of pledges in the current economic environment.

Expenditure

Capital Expenditure

Over the last five years the School has invested £112m in fixed asset additions. Just after the start of 2008/09 the £65m development of the New Academic Building at 54 Lincolns' Inn Fields and a £2m project to refurbish the main refectory were completed, both on time and budget. During the year £1.3m was invested in our Library, improving access to the course collection, improving and expanding storage and modifying the entrance to cope with ever increasing demands on this flagship facility. As noted above, at the end of year the School took the opportunity to acquire Sardinia House for £8.9m and just after the end of the year acquired the freehold of the White Horse Public House.

During the year £2.5m was invested in furniture and equipment mainly for the New Academic Building and a new software package for the halls of residence.

Once again, strong financial performance has allowed us to fund this without recourse to our borrowing facility.

Net debt/cash

Report of the Director for 2008-09

Principal Risks and Uncertainties

The School's Strategic Plan addresses the key risks threatening the achievement of the School's strategic objectives over the next five years. Protecting and developing the School's reputation is key to its future. The maintenance of the highest standards for recruitment of both staff and students remains central to the School.

Cumulative investment in tangible assets

With a high proportion of income from student fees, the global economic situation and issues relating to student visas and immigration represent risks faced by the School. They are mitigated by the geographic diversity of the School's student intake, the current high number of applications per place, provision for potential under recruitment in our financial planning, and a low debt gearing.

As discussed above, actions are in place to address the risk that arises from student satisfaction with teaching not being at the desired level. A process of five year planning and detailed annual monitoring operates to ensure that teaching programmes are relevant and world class in academic content. This also ensures that courses with lower student demand are reviewed and updated or replaced.

The School has developed and participates in a range of programmes to attract students from underrepresented groups. As described earlier, substantial sums have been raised from donors and contributed directly from tuition fee income to provide awards and bursaries to encourage those very able students to study at the School who do not otherwise have the financial means to do so. The quality of teaching is primarily determined by the quality of the faculty and the School continues to seek out and attract world class academics with competitive salaries, promotion prospects and sabbatical leave entitlement.

The importance of HEFCE income has already been referred to. The announcement of a significant cut in the School's research funding from 2009/10 has already prompted a range of compensatory actions to be agreed. Should, as seems increasingly likely, public funding be reduced further the School would revisit these responses and review its longer term investment plans. In doing so the School's governing body, Council will remain absolutely committed to protecting and improving the quality of teaching and research.

Financial planning is undertaken over a ten year time horizon to reflect the long term nature of both staff development and capital investment planning. The School's Finance and General Purposes Committee reviews these plans and risks at least three times a year so that appropriate actions can be taken to address deviations from financial objectives.

The staff survey carried out in 2006 indicated high levels of satisfaction with the School as a place to work. Since then the central administration, the Library and IT Services have all retained Investors In People accreditation. A Staff Consultative Council has been established to build on the existing sound base of good staff relations and improve employee engagement. It is planned to repeat the staff survey in 2009 as part of a process of monitoring risk in this area.

The risk that the School's infrastructure could fail to meet the increasing demands and expectations of staff and students is being addressed through an Estates strategy for the refurbishment and redevelopment of the campus. An extensive condition survey of the site was completed during the year and a substantial increase in staffing in the School's Estates department has been approved to ensure the works identified in the survey and the overall Estate strategy are delivered.

Following the appointment of a Director of Business Continuity the School has developed an integrated and comprehensive approach to the planning for and coordination of responses to major adverse or unforeseen events. Work in this area has seen the successful implementation of an outsourced off-site data storage, backup and recovery facility and most recently comprehensive plans to deal with the implications of a flu pandemic.

Conclusion

I think it is fair to say that, overall, 2008/09 was another year of good progress for LSE. We continued to recruit excellent faculty and lively, highly motivated students from around the globe. Our sound financial position allows us to face the future with a reasonable degree of confidence. The environment for universities will not be easy in the next three to five years, but we are better placed than most to survive and prosper.
