Report of the Director for 2010-2011

When this report is published, I will have been Director of the School (The London School of Economics and Political Science, a company limited by guarantee) for seven months and the process to appoint my successor will be nearing completion. It has been a very busy period, and I am sure it will be equally busy – and equally rewarding – in the next few months before he or she takes up the post. There is much to do.

One of the highlights of the year for all at the School was the award on the 10 October 2010 of the Nobel Memorial Prize for Economic Science to our colleague, Professor Christopher Pissarides, jointly with Peter Diamond from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Dale Mortensen from Northwestern University, for their work on the economics of unemployment and the effect of search friction. Christopher has been an LSE person throughout his academic career. He was awarded his PhD at LSE in 1973 and has been on the faculty since then. He is the 16th member of staff and alumni to be awarded a Nobel Prize.

Howard Davies

Howard was Director for nine months of the academic and financial year to which this report relates. He served with great distinction from September 2003 until his departure in April 2011.

The circumstances of his resignation were unfortunate. In 2009, after extensive deliberation, the School's Council had accepted a pledge of £1.5 million financial support for scholarships and research from Dr Saif al Islam Gaddafi's charitable foundation in good faith, understanding the Gaddafi family's history, but hopeful that the School could bring its influence to bear in a positive way. Unfortunately, the Gaddafis chose a different path with tragic consequences for the Libyan people, and, as we now know, for themselves. Howard decided that the honourable course for him was to resign, and Council reluctantly accepted that decision.

The Council commissioned Lord Woolf to produce an independent report on the School's connections with Libya, and the University of London has been examining whether or not there were any irregularities in relation to Dr Gaddafi's degree, which was awarded under University of London regulations, not those of LSE. After the finalisation of these accounts, when both Lord Woolf's report and the University of London's findings are available, Council will be reviewing them and agreeing any actions necessary to strengthen our processes.

Whatever the outcomes of those inquiries, the record of achievement during Howard's Directorship was outstanding. The achievements on research, student satisfaction with teaching, development of external relations, fundraising and widening participation are reported elsewhere. In Howard's time there is an unbroken record of achievement of financial objectives set by Council. Less obvious publicly were his commitments to improvement of the estate, to environmental sustainability, where LSE has become a leader in universities in London, and his commitment to equality and diversity, reflected in an increase in the number of female members of Council from five when he was appointed in 2003 to 14 – 50 per cent – as of today. But perhaps the greatest compliment is from our current Students' Union president, Alex Peters-Day. Asked what sort of person the students would like as the next Director, she said "one like Howard", by which she meant one who was accessible to students and who put a very high priority on ensuring they have an outstanding education at LSE.

The Board of Directors of LSE – the members of Council who are directors – report elsewhere in these accounts on the public benefit objectives of the School, the beneficiaries and the benefits delivered. Only a small sample of the activities of departments, research centres, other staff, students, alumni, donors and other members of the LSE community is reported there. We are proud that LSE, the smallest of the 20 Russell Group universities, has a reach and impact far beyond the narrow confines of Houghton Street.

The future

By the end of summer 2012, it is anticipated that only three of the current seven members of the Director's Management Team will still be in post. Myself, Adrian Hall, secretary and director of administration, and Jean

Report of the Director for 2010-2011

Sykes, chief information officer, will be retiring. Professor Janet Hartley will be sent to Siberia (she is, of course, an eminent Russian historian and will be pursuing her research) and Paul Kelly, currently head of the Department of Government, will succeed her as Pro-director for teaching and learning.

This summer, the Director's Management Team has been considering the strategic challenges that are facing the School which we believe will affect its long term health. We have begun to address some of the issues but there is much thinking and work to do to tackle these challenges. Council discussed the challenges at an away day in September of this year, in five main categories

- Research policy and financing;
- Teaching, the new funding environment, quality improvement and the student experience;
- Staff recruitment and retention;
- Financial strategy;
- Service administration and information management.

We are critically aware that there are inter-relationships between them and that we need to think in an integrated manner.

Research policy

Pro-director for research and external relations, Professor Stuart Corbridge, and our new Research Director David Coombe have been developing a research policy paper over the last few months with a far ranging set of proposals.

There is no doubt that LSE staff are producing high quality research and are performing very well against available indicators. The School is a world centre for advanced research. LSE's position as a world-leading research university was confirmed by our outstanding success in the 2008 UK Research Assessment Exercise (RAE 2008). LSE had the highest percentage of world leading research of any university in the country, coming first in the UK when ranked by percentage receiving the top 4* grade and equal second in the UK when ranked using a grade point average of research strengths. LSE came top nationally (by grade point average) in economics, law, social policy and European studies, with anthropology coming second, albeit with the highest percentage of 4* research of any anthropology department.

The School is now preparing for the replacement to the RAE – the Research Excellence Framework (REF), to take place in 2014. REF 2014 will for the first time include a measure of the impact of research, an area in which LSE has traditionally excelled. It is clear that we will need to continue to attract and retain high quality staff and to enhance funding and support for research if we are to maintain our status as a leading research led university. We must have the ability to compete internationally with the best universities in the world. It is no longer just a question of competing with institutions in the United States; there is a growing number of well-funded universities and research institutes in Europe and Asia.

Maintaining our research reputation is critical to our ability to attract high quality staff and students, and for the development of innovative training courses outside the conventional teaching core, such as executive MSc's.

It is evident that we cannot rely on direct government funding for research. Despite the School's improved performance in the 2008 RAE, our research grant (QR allocation) fell from £18.3m to £15.8m in 2009-10. Although it rose to £16.8m for 2011-12, future funding levels are highly uncertain. We know that HEFCE will no longer fund research output rated at 2* or less, but we do not know how far government direction will push more of the available funds into the STEM subjects and away from arts, humanities and social science.

So far the coalition government has concentrated on teaching in its Higher Education White Paper, but there is a forthcoming paper on innovation and research strategy. It is a fair bet that technology, innovation, knowledge exchange and contributions to the country's economic growth will feature heavily. What all this will mean for social science research funding is not clear, but it seems likely that however well we do in the next REF we are unlikely to see any additional funds from HEFCE.

Indirect government funding via the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) is also uncertain. ESRC's budget has already been cut, and it is vulnerable to pressures to concentrate funding on the STEM subjects and those with a clear potential impact on the manufacturing sector. Competition for grant funding from ESRC is already intense. The ESRC has recently announced that the overall application success rate is down to an all time low of 16 per cent from over 30 per cent just a few years ago, and for standard grants the rate is even lower at 12 per cent.

There is a need, therefore, to develop a wide range of alternative funding sources. Many sources will involve competitive bidding, and only high quality, innovative bids will succeed. Some sources, such as charities and the European Union, will not cover anything approaching full economic costs and great care will need to be taken to ensure that the research conducted makes a real contribution to our research priorities and reputation. As the Libya situation has demonstrated, other funding from foundations and the private sector involves risks and it is well recognised that enhanced safeguards will have to be put in place.

The increasingly competitive and financially constrained research world represents a considerable challenge.

Teaching, the new fees arrangements, quality improvement and the student experience

The School's faculty and management are very aware that LSE's long term sustainability depends on its ability to attract high quality students into our teaching programmes. Tuition fees represent a significant proportion of our total income and this proportion is projected to rise.

At undergraduate level the government's "reforms" represent a considerable challenge for the whole Higher Education sector, as grants from HEFCE decline and are replaced by increased fees for UK and European Union students. In LSE's case, by 2014-15 we expect to receive almost no government funding for teaching.

The impact of higher student fees on student demand across our subject range can at this stage only be the subject of speculation, although it is certainly possible that demand for degree programmes perceived to be more vocationally relevant will rise at the expense of other traditional "academic" subjects. We will, of course, monitor demand shifts carefully and respond appropriately. Some universities, largely in the newer university sector, have already announced the closure of programmes with low demand. We are not currently contemplating any such moves. However, we will need to be able to respond flexibly to demand trends and will keep our options open.

This challenge is sector wide and LSE is better placed than most institutions to meet the challenge. We still have a very high number of applicants per place, and for home/EU places our applicants per place are well above competitor institutions. We have a considerable safety margin. Our students normally go to graduate level jobs and they still command relatively high first job salaries; facts which will emerge more prominently when all universities provide more information for applicants. We are also in a much stronger financial position than most institutions and therefore more able to cope with the uncertainties.

The fee levels and potential demand shifts are just one challenge. Another is the government's decision to allow institutions to take all the students they can attract with AAB A-level grades or equivalent. We rank highly amongst universities in the proportion of student intake with AAB and above, around 95 per cent. It is perhaps also worth noting that the government is considering lowering the AAB threshold from 2012-13, which would mean that all our current places would be subject to free competition. We do not know how other universities will respond, although it seems probable that there will be increased competition for AAB students, particularly for those from disadvantaged backgrounds and areas which figure in all institutions' access agreements. Again, we will have to monitor this carefully and make appropriate adjustments to financial support arrangements and other incentives.

With all the attention paid in the higher education sector and the wider as necessary public domain to changes to home/EU undergraduate fees, we also have to pay due attention to overseas undergraduates and the half of our students who are post-graduate, many of whom already pay substantial fees. As in other areas, the competition for taught postgraduate students is getting more intense. Many more UK universities have extended postgraduate provision, and competition is increasing from Europe and Asia.

Given this increasingly competitive environment in which we operate, teaching quality, the teaching infrastructure and the overall student experience will be of even greater importance than in the past. Student expectations are already high and are likely to rise, which means that we will have to work even harder to improve levels of student satisfaction. Fortunately, the work of Pro-director Professor Janet Hartley and the Teaching Task Force is already bearing fruit, as evidenced by the significant improvements in National Student Survey scores. However, there is still more work to be done at all levels, including in the training of post-graduate research students and ensuring that the new ESRC Doctoral Training Centre is a great success.

Those who visit Houghton Street will notice that the old St Philips building has gone, and work is well under way on the development of the new Students' Centre, designed by O'Donnell and Tuomey with the highest BREEAM environmental sustainability rating. Scheduled for completion in 2013, the project will cost £38.7m. Less visible is the work on 32 Lincoln's Inn Fields, the old Land Registry Building located on the south east corner of London's largest garden square, acquired during the year for £37.5m. We are undertaking a £17.5m remodelling of this Grade 2 listed neo-Jacobean building to a sensitive design by architects Jestico and Whiles, to provide 11,500 square metres (GIA) of academic accommodation, teaching, student and conference space.

While it is great research and teaching that our students come here for, not our buildings, these essential investments in our estate – and others to come – will enable us to provide facilities for students that are commensurate with our academic standing.

Staff recruitment, retention and development

Although the turnover of academic staff is still relatively low – less than five per cent in 2010-11 – this does not reflect the full extent of the challenge.

There are external challenges that we face in managing staffing and employee relations issues. On 1 October 2011 the default retirement age passed into history. On the same date, the Universities Superannuation Scheme introduced changes to make it more financially sustainable. Limits to tax relief on pension contributions introduced in April 2011 make the USS pension scheme less attractive than it was to our higher paid staff, although it is still a very attractive and significant employee benefit. London is an expensive place to live with high housing costs, and relocation costs can be as much as a year's net salary (or more) for people selling a property elsewhere and buying in the London region. We are also concerned about the impact of proposed changes to the government's immigration policy and visa regulations on our ability to attract staff from overseas, and this represents a significant risk to our ability to recruit the best staff from across the globe.

We are now working to get a more consistent approach and to ensure our remuneration packages remain competitive in this changing environment. Work reviewing compensation and benefits and other significant factors in recruitment and retention is underway. In considering remuneration packages we are very conscious of the dangers of pay inflation, a critical issue given that staff costs account for nearly 60 per cent of our total expenditure.

The School's subject portfolio has, of course, changed over time with additional subject areas added, and some departments have very successfully taken the opportunity to develop new teaching and research programmes in response to student demand, emerging areas of intellectual enquiry and new funding opportunities. However, many such changes are additional and it is much harder to reshape under conditions of no growth and financial constraint. Change will be slow if it depends on existing staff leaving for the recruitment of new staff with different expertise. The potential for staff retraining exists, but implementation is not a trivial exercise, and it will not be the right option for everybody. The School has implemented a time limited Voluntary Leavers Scheme in the current Michaelmas term, which may also give us some opportunities to change the skill mix, but it is, of course, voluntary.

Over the coming year, we will be aiming to improve the robustness of processes to review and debate what the academic portfolio should look like in the medium term, to develop plans to bring all departments towards the standards of the best, to make the right choices when historic teaching areas are no longer supported by student demand, and to support heads of department to innovate and to respond to demand changes.

To date, very few universities have opted out of the national pay bargaining scheme and introduced local bargaining schemes. On balance being party to the national scheme has been beneficial to employers and employees, but it is clear that strains are showing. With very high housing costs in London and increasing competition for high quality staff, we need to consider whether the national scheme will inhibit recruitment and retention. It is also unclear whether the scheme itself will be able to survive as the government's plans for the HE sector are implemented. We need at least to consider carefully our future options.

Financial strategy

It goes without saying that our financial health will be critical to our ability to meet these challenges. The School is in a strong financial position and effective planning and control processes should ensure that target surpluses are met.

However, this financial position should not breed complacency. The special economies and revenue generation exercise conducted last year showed that efficiency savings can be made, resources redistributed and departments encouraged to generate additional income. However, there is a danger that this will be viewed as a one-off measure and that we will return to a situation where new initiatives or demands for services/facilities are assumed to justify additional expenditure. We need to ensure that our processes constantly review whether we need to do things, whether they can be done more cost-effectively, and whether investments are yielding, or are likely to yield, adequate returns, both financially and academically.

We are entering a period of greater uncertainty, with more competition for students, for staff and for research funding. In addition the quality of our estate, while now excellent in parts, still lags behind that of most of our competitors. We still have about 48 per cent of the non-residential estate in the lower condition categories, which is not optimal for either students or the working conditions of staff. Investments in the estate will need to continue, but it seems certain that capital grants from the government will not be available as in the past.

We are also in a position of having no real endowment cushion. Our endowments are virtually all tied to specific posts or scholarships, which are additional to our "core" provision and which in some cases no longer raise enough income to cover costs. Council has approved in principle proposals to establish new general School endowments, which will have implications for fund-raising priorities, and the Finance and Development Committees will oversee the implementation of these in the coming year.

Service administration and information management

The last challenge, service administration and information management arises in part from the forthcoming retirements of Jean Sykes and Adrian Hall noted above, in part from the need to ensure that our essential support services are the best they can be as we enter a period of greater uncertainty and financial stringency, and in part from a need to ensure that the services are flexible enough to help the School respond to strategic challenges.

Support services are under increased pressure, and there are several areas where service review is likely to be necessary in the current year.

Changes to a more student centred and competitive environment have implications for most service areas and in particular those dealing with student recruitment. These pressures will be exacerbated by recently announced proposals by UCAS if a post-qualification admission process is to be implemented for undergraduate entry.

Research policy proposals will place more demands on the Research Division, which is currently undergoing restructuring to improve support to academic researchers. Both the Research Division and ODAR (the Office of Development and Alumni Relations) will be affected by moves to improve procedures for the acceptance of donations and research grants and contracts.

Human Resources have a key role to address some of the competition and legislative challenges affecting employee issues.

We are currently recruiting a new director of information management and technology, who will lead development of a new IT strategy, which will help ensure that IT services keep pace with the needs of the academic community, students and service departments, and develop increased service reliability and resilience.

Steps have already been taken to ensure that new academic initiatives, major new research grant programmes, and governmental or School wide policy shifts are evaluated in terms of the impact on service divisions, with the aim of being less reactive, better anticipating future developments, exploring more efficient working practices and the opportunities, where beneficial, for more shared services and/or co-operative service provision.

Ideally, when I hand over to my successor, I would like the School to be in a position where we have identified future support service needs, practical and cost effective administrative options, and we have the evidence to give meaningful advice to the incoming Director and what will be a much changed Director's Management Team.

For the financial year ending 31 July 2011 the School achieved a surplus for reinvestment of £21.2m, equivalent to 9.1 per cent of turnover, compared to a surplus of £19.2m for 2009-10 (8.8 per cent of turnover). This surplus includes £1.2m (2009-10 – £1.0m) received from the "Matched Funding Scheme" for voluntary giving and £2.3m surplus from the sale of two small residential properties. Excluding these items the operating surplus for 2010-11 was £17.6m or 7.5 per cent of turnover.

For a number of years the School has budgeted for a surplus between three per cent and four per cent of turnover. This target recognised that a sustainable surplus is required to fund loan repayments, to support capital and infrastructure investment and to provide the School with the flexibility to invest in new academic initiatives. A combination of strong student recruitment, an increase in the contribution from “non-core” activities and effective financial management have delivered consistently strong surpluses and 2010-11 is no exception.

During 2011 our Finance Committee has developed a formal School financial strategy which represents an overarching constitution to underpin financial planning and decision making to ensure that the School is able to meet its strategic objectives. This strategy sits above and outside of any particular institutional decisions although all significant decisions will be tested against it. Work in 2011-12 will include developing an operational framework to ensure that the implications of this development are embedded in the financial planning and management process.

Over the past five years the School has actually achieved an average surplus of 11 per cent generating £109.2m which has allowed the School to pay down debt and move to a net cash position and to make significant progress in improving and expanding its campus.

With the prospect of significant reductions in government funding for teaching and research and fewer fundraising opportunities our Council has agreed the target range 3-5 per cent for 2011-12 and we have plans in place to deliver this.

Income – total

	2010-11 £m	2009-10 £m	% Change
Funding council grants	29.7	30.6	-2.9%
Tuition fees	114.7	106.6	+7.6%

VAT (Fleming) claim	–	1.2	-100.0%
Surplus on sale of residences	2.3	–
Total income	233.7	220.9	+5.8%

Gross income grew in total by 5.8 per cent compared to 2009-10. Income from other sources grew by 5.8 per cent following another successful year for the School's residences and catering operations, improvements in our rate of VAT recovery and expansion in the activities of the International Growth Centre.

Endowment and investment income consists of two elements; income generated by endowments to meet expenditure on bursaries and research and interest earned on the School's cash deposits and gilts. Cash is held in term deposits with a range of UK registered and regulated have credit ratings of AA- or better. Deposit terms range from one to 12 months and the maximum deposit at any one bank or bank group is normally £20m. During the year the School purchased some short dated UK government gilts.

Income: funding council grants

2010-11 Income

Report of the Director for 2010-2011

At only 12.7 of total income the School has a relatively low proportion of HEFCE (Higher Education Funding Council of England) grant funding compared with most UK higher education institutions. Nevertheless the £29.7m grant including £0.1m from JISC (the Joint Information and Infrastructure Systems Committee) is an essential contribution to the financial viability of the School, as have been the various rounds of teaching and research capital funding. Funding Council grant income fell by 2.9 per cent. However, the block grant for teaching and research fell by 8.4 per cent, a consequence of the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise (RAE) which cut the School's research funding substantially despite a performance that matched the 2001 RAE. The impact of this cut was delayed until 2010-11 by £1.5m of non-recurrent moderation and transitional funding paid in 2009-10.

On teaching grant the extension of the fee cap to £9,000 for home and EU undergraduates and the ending of teaching funding for band C and D subjects removes the uncertainty over future government support for teaching. However the School remains concerned about the impact on students and student recruitment. The magnitude of the change in fee level necessary to offset the cut of teaching grant coupled with the continuing lack of clarity surrounding bursary and loan arrangements are likely to combine to create widespread confusion and volatility over the next few years.

Students

The School had 8,917 full time students in 2010-11.

Full-time students 2006-07 – 2010-11

Full-time students in 2010-11

Full-time students in 2010-11 by geographic area

This was slightly ahead of the plan for expansion of the School to 9,000 full time students by 2012 and was a contributing factor to achieving a surplus above the three to four of turnover target. Overseas students (those from outside the United Kingdom or other European Union countries) account for roughly half the School's student population, reflecting both the international flavour of the School's student body and our reputation.

Financial support for students

The School provides financial support for students through a comprehensive range of bursaries and support packages. In 2010-11 £10.4m was spent, funded by philanthropic, endowment and other income.

Report of the Director for 2010-2011

Research income

The increase in research income seen over the last few years has now started to level out as the full impact of full economic costing of projects since 2005 has reached its peak, increasing slightly in this financial year to £24.1m compared to £23.9m in 2009-10.

Although UK research councils remain the largest funder of research, accounting for 25 per cent of the School's overall research income, total income from this sector has fallen by 15 per cent since 2009-10, largely due to the anticipated drop in the number of new research council awards funded during 2010-11, with a small reduction due to recently announced efficiency savings. The School was pleased to receive continuation funding from the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) for the Centre for Economic Performance (CEP), an interdisciplinary research centre at the LSE Research Laboratory. Established by the ESRC in 1990, the centre is in its 21st year of operation and is one of the leading economic research groups in Europe. Income from the European Union remains strong, up three per cent on last year, when it doubled. The trend seen over the last three years of a year on year decrease of income from UK charitable organisations has continued this year with a further drop of 35 per cent, to £798k. However, research funded by other external sources continues to grow, with an increase of five per cent. This category includes income from the International Growth Centre's (IGC) Research Programme accounting for 19 per cent of the total income from other sources. Income from the IGC's research programme increased by £1.1m in 2010-11. Other notable funding during the year came from the Alfred Herrhausen Society's support for the Urban Age programme and the Reserve Bank of India. LSE also received funding during the year for a major new programme of work on governance, security and justice in fragile and conflict affected states from the Department for International Development.

The School's strategy remains to compete successfully for high quality peer reviewed research. Where it is possible and appropriate to our academic aims, we also participate in commercial non-peer reviewed research, though undertaking research of low academic benefit purely for income generation is not a strategic aim.

Steps are being taken in the context of a research policy to introduce in the coming year measures to improve the School's performance in grant-winning.

Income – halls of residence

The School offers 3,765 bed spaces across 10 halls of residence and University of London halls and we are able to offer the guarantee of a place to all first year undergraduate students. During vacation periods, some of the halls operate on a commercial basis through a trading subsidiary LSE Lets Limited, providing hotel accommodation for a wide range of customers. In 2010-11 this trading activity generated £6.1m of revenue. The surplus from this is used to subsidise student rents and to contribute to the School's overall surplus. Residences operate on a "self financing" basis, with room rents set at a level which, after the subsidy from vacation business, is sufficient to cover operating costs, rents and capital charges.

LSE Enterprise Limited and DUKE CE Limited

LSE Enterprise Limited is the wholly owned arm of the School that exists to develop and apply the social science expertise of LSE into commercial applications in order to help answer questions, resolve issues and develop managerial skills.

The company delivers its activities through its two trading operations LSE Executive Education and LSE Consulting, as well as through a special arm of its activity concentrating on the Spanish market place. The company additionally has a long standing commercial relationship with Duke Corporate Education in the field of customised corporate executive education.

Projects range from the training of overseas civil servants with structured executive teaching, through to complex interdisciplinary commercial research projects applying academic methodologies to major policy and commercial questions. These activities connect the School's academics to senior industry figures by creating opportunities for their research to deliver insight and impact on government and industry alike. The successful joint venture with Duke Corporate Education Limited to supply customised strategy courses to multi-national organisations continued well during the year. The underpinning relationship was changed as LSE Enterprise exchanged its equity position in the joint venture to a royalty revenue based on global turnover.

The business environment during 2010-11 was very challenging for the company. The public sector spending cuts significantly reduced UK based activity in consultancy, commercial research and training programmes. Overseas training programmes, including some activity in Spain, were also affected.

During the course of the year the company was nearing completion of a major contract to deliver public administration training to Libya. The revolution in the country meant that a final fee payment of £0.7m of a contract value of £2.3m was not made. The outstanding balance is provided for as there is little prospect of any further payment being received.

Turnover was £5.6m, down 27 per cent on the prior year figure of £7.8m. Gross profit was £2.4m for the year and after overheads and bad debt provision the company returned a profit of £0.4m. The Gift Aid paid to the School from this profit contributes to its teaching and research activities.

During the year the company paid 215 LSE academics and research staff a total of £1.8m and a broader community of 248 academics and consultants a further £1.6m. This additional revenue represents an important supplement to academics' income, and is a useful contributor for attracting and retaining key staff.

Expenditure – total

	2010-11 £m	2009-10 £m	% Change
Staff costs	121.3	117.9	+2.9%
Other operating expenses	84.7	75.2	+12.6%
Depreciation	5.6	5.4	+3.7%
Interest payable	3.2	3.2	-1.3%
Total expenditure	214.8	201.7	+6.5%

Total expenditure grew by 6.5 per cent (2009-10 – 8.8 per cent) with pay costs increasing by 2.9 per cent, of which 0.4 per cent was attributable to the pay award in August 2010, 0.2 per cent from the effect of a full year of the increase in employer contributions to USS, 1.4 per cent resulted from promotions, increments, honoraria and additional work and 0.9 per cent from an overall increase of 14 in full time equivalent staff and changes to graduate teaching assistant contracts. The School operates "Pension Plus", a salary sacrifice pension contribution scheme.

Average pay across all staff increased by 2.2 per cent between 2009-10 and 2010-11. Other operating expenditure grew in total by 12.6 per cent (2009-10 – 7.4 per cent) while the School's interest payable costs remained stable as interest rates did not change between the two years.

Balance sheet and liquidity

During 2010-11 the School's net assets grew by 8.6 per cent (2009-10 – 13.8 per cent) to £365.6m, boosted by the receipt of additional endowments of £10.8m.

Net assets 2007-11

The School's cash deposits fell to £36.0m during 2010-11 from an opening balance of £93.0m. The purchase of £19.9m of gilts and the purchase of 32 Lincoln's Inn Fields for £37.5m account for a large proportion of this reduction. The School has ambitious capital investment plans and holds a £61.5m loan facility of which £31.5m is currently drawn. The School's Finance Committee reviews borrowing capacity on a regular basis and considers it adequate to accommodate our current medium term plans.

Endowments and fundraising

During 2010-11 the School received £10.8m (2009-10, £15.1m) in endowments from a combination of new donors and receipts from existing pledges. Despite the uncertain and difficult economic outlook, fundraising has secured some major gifts. As a consequence the endowment grew by 12.5 per cent to £81.7m continuing the trend established in recent years.

The School's endowment funds that are invested are split into three separate pools: Pool A which is managed on a total return basis, Pool B which is invested to generate an income and the FER Pool which supports the Foundation for Economic Research.

The Investment Sub-Committee of Finance Committee oversees the asset allocation and investment strategy of these pools. The committee comprises a number of experienced investors, academics and a representative of the Students' Union and is advised by an external consultancy. The overall investment return after fees was 9.6 per cent for the year ended 31 July 2011.

The School received £1.2m (2009-10 – £1.0m) from the HEFCE Matched Funding Scheme to encourage development of philanthropic giving, which is accounted for on a receivables basis in the Income and Expenditure account and transferred to endowments. Under this scheme the School is eligible to receive a maximum of £2.8m over three years on the basis of £1 of Matched Funding for every £3 raised. The School expects to receive the balance of the £2.8m allocation in 2011-12.

Capital expenditure

	2010-11 £m
20 Kingsway freehold acquisition	4.7
32 Lincolns' Inn Fields purchase (including fees)	37.6
New Students' Centre construction costs	1.9
Tower 1 refurbishment	1.3
Other additions	0.7
Equipment	0.8
Total capital expenditure	47.0

This year the School has continued to invest in improving the estate with £47.0m (2009-10 – £10.0m) spent on fixed asset additions, bringing the total investment over the last five years to £115.5m.

The School acquired the freehold of 20 Kingsway, a property located at the edge of the existing campus that had been leased for a number of years. The building will be needed for academic accommodation while other buildings are refurbished but thereafter it offers a number of options including conversion to a residence, leasing to tenants or disposal.

In March 2011 the School completed the purchase of the former Land Registry building at 32 Lincoln's Inn Fields for £37.5m. This building is ideally located close to the existing campus and will provide over 120,000 square feet of teaching and academic space. Although the building is in good overall condition the School has decided to refurbish and enhance to a bespoke academic specification that will increase its capacity and its effectiveness as a dedicated teaching and research facility. This approach will enable the School to achieve best value for money from the project. It is an approach that reflects the School's long term strategy for the development of its estate that prioritises sustainable development.

The New Students' Centre, which is being built on the site of the St Philips building is now in construction. In July 2011 the School entered a contract to sell the Anson and Carleton Road properties to Zebra Housing, a major private provider of student accommodation in London. The sale generated a surplus on disposal of £2.3m and this has been treated as an exceptional item in the accounts (note 10). The School decided to sell the properties because of their location some distance from the campus and their need for substantial renovation. As part of the sale agreement, the School has secured an option to place a number of students' families in this or other accommodation operated by Zebra Housing.

The School's strategic aim remains to expand the number of bed spaces so it can offer places to all new incoming students. To meet this objective we continue actively to seek out potential and evaluate options for development as either the freeholder or a lessor in a managed development.

Financial sustainability and going concern

On behalf of Council the Finance Committee reviews a full set of 10-year financial projections each term against the School's strategic plan target of a surplus of three per cent to five per cent of turnover. These plans analyse and inform the financial decisions taken by the School and include prudent assessments of the uncertainties faced by the institution and where appropriate any correcting action that is planned. This long time horizon is an essential element of our process to clarify the implications of decisions, particularly recurrent investment decisions, and ensuring a focus on maintaining a sustainable mix of activities.

Principal risks and uncertainties

The School's strategic plan addresses the key risks threatening the achievement of the School's strategic objectives over the next five years. These risks are subject to frequent review by management and by the Audit Committee at least twice a year.

Protecting and developing the School's reputation is vital. Universities are ultimately about people, their ideas, analysis, enthusiasms and effort. The maintenance of the highest standards for staff and students is central to the School's prosperity. With a high proportion of income from student fees, the global economic situation and issues relating to student visas and immigration are significant risks. They are mitigated to some extent by the geographic diversity of the School's student intake, the current high number of applications per place, provision for potential under recruitment in our financial planning, and a low debt gearing. During the year the School has taken every opportunity to make representations to the Home Office to ensure that potential damage to the School's ability to recruit the best staff and students from around the world from revised visa procedures and regulation is understood and minimised. While there has been some success in the student visa area, it is not yet clear that the challenges relating to post study work visas and global staff recruitment are fully addressed by the government's proposals.

Improving student satisfaction is central to the School's five year strategic plan. A process of five year planning and detailed annual monitoring operates to ensure that teaching programmes are relevant and of the required high standard, and that those with lower demand are reviewed and updated or replaced. The 2011 National Student Survey indicated overall satisfaction at 84 per cent, a substantial improvement over the past two years.

The quality of teaching and research is primarily determined by the quality of the faculty. The School continues to seek out and attract world class academics, and I have spoken of the recruitment and retention challenge above. Specific provision has been made in the School's financial plans to ensure that we are able to preserve a pre-eminent position in many areas of the social sciences and significantly to enhance it in others.

Financial planning is undertaken over a ten year time horizon to reflect the long term nature of both staff development and capital investment planning. The School's Finance Committee reviews these plans and risks at least three times a year so that appropriate actions can be taken to address risks to financial objectives. There is an annual Council awayday that focuses on strategic issues. A small working group meets each term to consider in more detail particular future strategic challenges identified by Finance Committee.

The School's physical and information infrastructures are critical in attracting and retaining staff, enhancing the student experience and supporting the intellectual work of the School. For example, in addition to the investment in capital development and IT equipment, £0.8m was spent in the year on the removal of single points of failure and to improve resilience of our on-site data network. We are now in a position where data is more robust with off-site data storage, backup and recovery facilities available, single points of network failure addressed and comprehensive plans to deal with a wide variety of situations. There is further work to do on data security and applications resilience.

The School has developed an integrated and comprehensive approach to the planning for both emergency response and business continuity in the event of major issues.

Conclusion

The achievements and results of the last year place the School in a strong position. But the economic outlook is even more uncertain than it was 12 months ago and we face the prospect of a further slowdown in many parts of the world economy – possibly another recession. In the face of this difficult economic environment, the School remains committed to continuing investment to ensure that we maintain and develop our world class faculty and research environment, to improve our facilities, to increase our research impact and delivery of public benefit, to attract the students with the best potential to benefit from an LSE education whatever their background, and to ensure they get the most they can out of their time at LSE.

There is nothing in my power to make the world any easier for my successor, whoever he or she may be. But in my short tenure as Director I hope that I will have done all I can to ensure that I hand over the School to them in even better shape to face the future than that which I inherited from Howard Davies, to whom all of the LSE community are indebted.
