Gender Institute and Department of Sociology discussion

Budgeting for Gender Equality: is government economic policy fair to women?

Dr Claire Annesley
Lecturer in European politics, University of Manchester

Beatrix Campbell
Journalist, author, playwright, broadcaster

Professor Diane Elson
Professor in the Department of Sociology, University of Essex

Professor Susan Himmelweit
Professor of economics, Open University

Professor Judy Wajcman
Chair, LSE

Suggested hashtag for Twitter users: #lsegenderequality
Budgeting for Gender Equality: International Examples

Diane Elson
University of Essex and
UK Women’s Budget Group
Presentation at LSE Gender Institute and Department of Sociology, 11 May 2011
Government Budgets: Expenditure, Revenue, Deficits and Debts

- Expenditure on public services, infrastructure, income transfers
- Revenue raised through direct and indirect taxes, user charges, royalties
- Deficits when expenditure is greater than revenue
- Deficits appropriate in economic downturns
- Debt because governments borrow
- Debt is appropriate to fund investment
- UK currently has quite a large deficit to GDP ratio but not a large debt to GDP ratio
Budgets and Gender Equality

- Budgets appear to be gender neutral but can reduce or reinforce gender inequality.

- Budgeting for gender equality does NOT imply that 50 per cent of tax revenues should be paid by males and 50 per cent by females, because women’s incomes are lower than men’s.

- Budgeting for gender equality does NOT imply that 50 per cent of spending on EACH programme should accrue to females and 50 per cent should accrue to males, because women and girls and men and boys are present in different proportions in the groups relevant to different programmes.
Some Governments Have Begun to Budget for Gender Equality

- Australia
- India
- South Korea
- Morocco
- Austria
- Sweden

For more examples, see www.gender-budgets.org

In EU, European Structural Funds require Gender Impact Assessment.

In UK, Equalities Act 2010 requires Gender Impact Assessment.
Challenges of Budgeting for Gender Equality

• Moving beyond measuring and reporting on expenditure on programmes specifically targeted to women and girls, or to equal opportunities
• Conducting adequate gender impact assessments and introducing measures to mitigate adverse impacts on gender equality
• Maintaining gender equality objectives even if deficits are being reduced: example Andalucía
• Total expenditure cut by 1.4% in 2010, but expenditure on gender equality priority programmes rose by 2.7%
Importance of Independent Analysis by Gender Equality Advocates

• Women’s Budget Initiative, South Africa see www.idasa.org/ourproducts/resources/topic/gender

• Tanzania Gender Equality Network see www.tgnp.org

• UK Women’s Budget Group see www.wbg.org.uk
Gender Institute and Department of Sociology discussion

Budgeting for Gender Equality: is government economic policy fair to women?

Dr Claire Annesley
Lecturer in European politics, University of Manchester

Beatrix Campbell
Journalist, author, playwright, broadcaster

Professor Diane Elson
Professor in the Department of Sociology, University of Essex

Professor Susan Himmelweit
Professor of economics, Open University

Professor Judy Wajcman
Chair, LSE

---

Suggested hashtag for Twitter users: #lsegenderequality