

Welcome!

Welcome to the latest offer holder newsletter from the Department of Economics at LSE!

We are thrilled you will be joining us in the Department and look forward to meeting you in September. In the meantime, ensure you keep up-to-date with our news and follow us on Instagram, Twitter or like our Facebook page.

Checklist

✓ Accept your offer of a place on UCAS Track. See Responding to Your Offer

✓ Organise your accommodation & financial support arrangements as soon as possible

✓ Read your offer letter & the Offer Guide

✓ Refer to the Offer Holder webpage for next steps & submitting documents

Your Programme: what do economists do?

Economics is a set of analytical tools to help address the world's toughest societal problems. A first degree in economics from LSE prepares you for a career in a wide range of employments valuing analytical and quantitative skills, particularly government and central banks, financial services, research, and consulting. Our graduates also take up satisfying and important roles in sectors as diverse as international development, teaching, journalism, and many others. A significant number choose to go on to graduate study, not just in economics but also in finance, management, development, economic history and other fields.

You can find out more about our graduation destinations from the LSE Careers webpage What do LSE graduates do?

If you have any queries about what it's like to be a BSc student in the Department or the structure of your BSc programme, feel free to email our Undergraduate Programme Manager, Sarah Burton. Please note that Sarah is unable to answer any admissions related queries. These should be directed to the Undergraduate Admissions Office.

Recommended Watch: what economists really do

Watch "What Economists Really Do" Professor Oriana Bandiera's presentation at the 2018 Royal Economic Society Annual Public Lecture.

---

We look forward to welcoming you to your BSc programme, the Department and to LSE.

Professor Wouter Den Haan
Undergraduate Programme Director

Junius Olivier
Current First Year Tutor

Sarah Burton
Undergraduate Programme Manager

Unsubscribe / Manage email preferences