

BOOK LAUNCH

Prime Ministers in Greece: The Paradox of Power

The Greek system of government sustains a 'paradox of power' at its very core. The Constitution provides the PM with extensive and often unchecked powers. Yet, the operational structures, processes and resources around the PM undermine their power to manage the government. This book is concerned with a large question in one small, but highly problematic case: how can a PM establish control and coordination across his or her government?

This event is FREE and open to all.
No ticket is required and entry is on a first come-first served basis.

Date : Wednesday 7 October 2015

Time : 18.30-20.00

Speakers : Kevin Featherstone, Eleftherios Venizelos Professor of Contemporary Greek Studies & Professor of European Politics, LSE
Dimitris Papadimitriou, Professor of Politics and Director of the Manchester Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence (JMCE), University of Manchester

Discussant : Ed Page, Sidney and Beatrice Webb Professor of Public Policy, LSE

Venue : Wolfson Theatre, New Academic Building, LSE