R E P O R T

MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR

Three years ago LSE IDEAS was still a fledgling research centre with very high academic ambitions, but without the funding or the administrative resources to realize all of our plans. Today we are in a much better position to make things happen. Our funding is substantially improved, not least because of the generosity of our friends and supporters outside of the LSE. Their continuing help with making LSE IDEAS a research centre of global importance has been essential to our growth. We are also a much better managed centre than before. Our centre manager, Dr Emilia Knight, and her staff provide first-class support for our academic endeavours. We can take pride in offering an environment for research that is not only intellectually stimulating but also well organised in terms of how the centre is run.

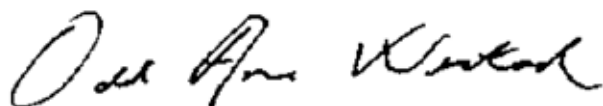

Over the past three years IDEAS has expanded its academic brief considerably. When we started up in 2008, most of our associates came from political science or history, and we still have very close relations with the LSE's International Relations and International History departments. Now, the intellectual concerns of colleagues from these two departments are part of a much larger mosaic within LSE IDEAS. Today there are people from all over the School attached to the centre, from Economics to Social Psychology and Anthropology. We are proud to be a hub for research on international affairs for colleagues from many different departments and many different schools of thought. And we are especially proud that many of us now engage in different forms of interdisciplinary work on important issues.

LSE IDEAS is a research centre within a great university, and it draws on all the advantages it gets from being associated with teaching and research on a broad scale. London has plenty of new institutions dealing with international affairs. LSE IDEAS is unique in the sense that it thrives on its association with the world's foremost social science university. Part of its success is that it has helped make on-going research at LSE more relevant to the policy debate. That we were listed among the world's most influential foreign policy think tanks last year is therefore not just a recognition for IDEAS but for the whole LSE community.

Top level research and debate is often as much about involvement and sheer fun as it is about long hours spent in libraries and archives. Our sense of ourselves is that IDEAS represents this ideal to the max. Hardly a day goes by without there being some kind of event, discussion, seminar, lecture, or just impromptu debate. And the socials, at IDEAS or a nearby pub, are sometimes as important for developing suggestions and points of view as are the more formal settings.

Nobody represents the IDEAS ideal of mixing serious debate with fun as much as my colleague Mick Cox. Mick and I set up the centre together five years ago, and he remains founding co-director of IDEAS after becoming emeritus professor of international relations last year. Mick also directs the centre's new executive MSc degree programme in Diplomacy and International Strategy. As you will see from this report, the new degree has been an outstanding success, helping train the next generation of top leaders in international affairs on a global scale.

As often happens when you are doing good stuff and having fun, the number of people who join up outgrow the facilities. This spring we realised that IDEAS could no longer be accommodated in Columbia House if we were to expand further. We therefore moved to the LSE Towers this summer, where we are found on Floors 9 and 10. I hope to see you there, or at one of the many events IDEAS organises around the School, in London or elsewhere.

Professor Arne Westad
Director, LSE IDEAS

Professor Michael Cox, Founding Co-Director

Michael Cox holds a Chair in the Department of International Relations at the London School of Economics. In 2004 he helped establish the Cold War Studies Centre, and in 2008 IDEAS, a foreign policy centre based at the LSE which aims to bring the academic and policy worlds together. In a 2012 international survey, IDEAS was ranked 4th in the world amongst the best university affiliated think tanks. Since joining the LSE he has also acted as Academic Director of both the LSE/PKU Summer School and of the Executive Summer School. In 2011 he launched a new Executive Masters in Diplomacy and International Strategy designed to teach senior foreign policy practitioners.

Professor Cox has held several senior professional positions in the field of international relations including Chair of the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR); member of the Executive Committee of the British International Studies Association and of The Irish National Committee for the Study of International Affairs; Associate Research Fellow Chatham House, London; Director of the David Davies Memorial Institute for the Study of International Politics, Aberystwyth; Senior Fellow Nobel Institute, Oslo; Chair of the United States Discussion Group at the Royal Institute of International Affairs; and Transatlantic Fellow at the Royal United Services Institute London. He also serves on the editorial board of several academic journals and has been editor of several leading journals in International Relations, including the Review of International Studies; International Relations; Cold War History; and International Politics.

Professor Cox is a well-known speaker on global affairs and has lectured in the United States, Australia, Asia, and in the EU. He has spoken on a range of contemporary global issues, though most recently he has focused on the role of the United States in the international system, the rise of Asia and whether or not the world is now in the midst of a major power shift.

Professor Cox is author, editor and co-editor of several books including Superpowers at the Crossroads (1990); US Foreign Policy after the Cold War: superpower without a mission? (1995); Rethinking the Soviet Collapse (1998); The Eighty Years Crisis: international relations, 1919-1999 (1998); The Interregnum: controversies in world politics, 1989-1999 (1999); American Democracy Promotion (2000); E.H. Carr: a critical appraisal (2000); A Farewell to Arms: from long war to long peace in Northern Ireland (2000; 2nd edition 2006); E.H. Carr: The Twenty Years' Crisis: introduction to the study of international relations (2001); Empires, Systems and States: great transformations in international politics (2002); How Might We Live? Global ethics for a new century (2002); The International Relations of The Twentieth Century: 8 volumes (2007); Global 1989: Continuity and Change in World Politics (2010); Soft Power and US Foreign Policy (2010) Introduction to International Relations, (2012); US Foreign Policy (2006; 2nd edition.2012); US Presidents and Democracy Promotion (2013); International Relations of the Cold War (2013); The Rise and Fall of the American Empire: From Bush to Obama (2013).

Professor Odd Arne Westad, Director

Arne Westad is professor of international history and an expert on contemporary international affairs. He is the general editor of the three-volume Cambridge History of the Cold War and an editor of the journal Cold War History. His latest book is Restless Empire: China and the World since 1750. His previous book, The Global Cold War, won the Bancroft Prize, the Harrington Award of the American Political Science Association, and the Akira Iriye International History Award. It was listed by the Council on Foreign Relations as one of the five most important books on international affairs for 2005/06. It has been translated into fourteen languages.

Born in Norway, Professor Westad studied history, philosophy and modern languages at the University of Oslo and received his PhD in history from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. During the 1980s he worked for several international aid agencies in Southern Africa and South Asia. He has taught at the University of North Carolina and at Johns Hopkins University and served for eight years as Director of Research at the Norwegian Nobel Institute. Since 1998 he has been in the Department of International History at LSE, where he teaches Cold War history and the history of East Asia. He served as Head of Department 2004-07.

Since 2007 Professor Westad has helped build LSE IDEAS, the LSE's centre for the study of international affairs, diplomacy and strategy, of which he is now co-director. The centre is the hub for nine separate research programmes, ranging from Transatlantic Relations to African International Affairs and Cold War Studies. It also helps run the LSE's double Masters degree in International Affairs with Peking University, and has set up an executive Masters degree in Strategy and Diplomacy. In addition to its research and teaching, LSE IDEAS works with several foreign ministries on matters of policy planning and development.

Professor Westad has held visiting fellowships at Cambridge University, Hong Kong University, New York University and the University of Venice. He has been the recipient of major grants from the John D. and Catharine T. MacArthur Foundation and the British Arts and Humanities Research Council. He has served as the international co-ordinator of the Russian Foreign Ministry's Advisory Group on Declassification and Archival Access and has advised several other governments on such issues. He now heads the British Academy's documentary project on British-Russian relations during the Cold War. He is also widely known as a reviewer, lecturer and external examiner. In 2000, Professor Westad was awarded the Bernath Lecture Prize from the Society for Historians of American Foreign Relations. He was elected a Fellow of the British Academy in 2011.

Professor Westad often lectures to general audiences in different parts of the world on key issues in international affairs, such as China's foreign policy and the situations in Korea, Afghanistan and Iran.

BRIEF SUMMARY

The LSE IDEAS Africa International Affairs Programme (AIAP) is designed to promote greater understanding of the extent to which the recent past in Africa is particularly relevant to domestic policies, inter-state relations, as well as the continent's relationship with the world at large. It is broadly divided into five geographic parts, mirroring the regional economic communities - the Magreb (The North Africa Initiative); the Horn; Southern Africa; Central and West Africa. In all of these areas it promotes collaboration with regional scholars, as well as research and academic institutions, through a series of seminars and conferences. AIAP's activity is geared towards fulfilling three main objectives. First, it aims to promote knowledge on Africa through an extensive series of events, such as public lectures, graduate workshops and working seminars. Second, it acts as a hub, by providing an active electronic network for scholars, practitioners and policy makers. The third key component of AIAP's activity is to support both, established and emerging African scholars and foreign researchers wishing to further their studies in contemporary history and politics in the African region.

AIAP has 10 Associates, including Thandika Mkandawire, Chris Saunders, Vladimir Shubin and Anna-Mart van Wyk.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- In May 2013 the AIAP hosted an event to launch the publication of its Special Report entitled 'Africa and Emerging Powers', alongside a public lecture on the topic.
- AIAP's evening seminars and public lecture series have included talks by: Dinesh Mahtani on Iran and Israel: Covert War Games in Africa (May 2012); Prof Stig Hansen and Tom Patterson on Piracy in Somalia: Inside the Pirate Business (February, 2012); Mr Pierre Dinan on The Miracle of Mauritius (February 2012); Dr Shanta Devarajan and Eric-Vincent Guichard on The Aid/Trade Debate: Africa and Globalisation (October 2011); and Mr Stephane Gompertz on African Revolutions and Political Transitions: The View from Paris (May 2011).
- As part of its cultural activities, the AIAP hosted the UK premiere of Robert Mugabe: What Happened? a film by Simon Bright, Zimbabwean director and producer.

Publications

Strategic updates, situation analysis reports and book publications that have featured on the website include:

- The AIAP Special Report on 'Africa and Emerging Powers' published in June 2013;
- Marcus Power and Ana Alves eds., "China and Angola: A Marriage of Convenience" (Pambazuka Press, 2012);
- Dr Charles Abiodun Alao, "Mugabe and the Politics of Security in Zimbabwe" (McGill-Queens University Press, 2012)
- Dr Chris Alden and Fatten Aggad-Clerx, "Chinese Investments and Employment Creation in Algeria and Egypt" (Economic Brief, African Development Bank, 2012);

African Research Fellowship

AIAP is delighted to announce that the first African Research Fellowship to be held at LSE IDEAS has been awarded to Dr Sergio Chichava from the Instituto de Estudos Sociais e Economicos (IESE), Maputo, Mozambique. During the fellowship period from 1 January 2013 until 30 June 2013, Dr Chichava's research will focus on the topic of the Rising Powers in Africa, and in particular the role of China and Brazil in Mozambique's agriculture sector. The second African Research Fellowship to be held at LSE IDEAS is to be awarded for three months in late 2013. The programme has been generously supported by an Anonymous Donor, Atlantic Philanthropies, Richard Delbridge, and the LSE Centennial Fund.

FUNDING TO-DATE

The LSE Annual Fund has awarded a further £18,000 to the AIAP for the development of the Programme.

BRIEF SUMMARY

The objectives of the Balkan International Affairs Programme (BIAP) are to promote the understanding of the troubled past of the region, to assist in the search for the answers to the challenges of today and to contribute to defining a vision of the Balkan future. It aims to achieve these goals by engaging in debates on current issues and challenges and – together with Balkan institutions, scholars and practitioners – working to formulate specific and qualified responses. As a result, the BIAP's activity is geared to provide regional governments, academic and research institutions, and NGOs with expertise and assistance; to conduct strategic studies and leadership programmes; and to facilitate research through fellowships at the LSE or in our partner institutions for regional senior scholars, post-doctoral fellows and graduate students.

This year the BIAP will be transforming into the Southern Europe International Affairs Programme (SEIAP). The aim of SEIAP is to study how the contemporary political, economic and social features of the Southern European region were shaped. This interdisciplinary initiative is made up of historians and political scientists interested in exploring interactions in domestic, regional and international events and developments that had wide-lasting impact on Southern Europe.

The BIAP has 8 Associates, including Dr Marietta Stankova, Prof Evanthis Hatzivassiliou, Dr Effie Pedaliu and Dr Vladimir Unkovski-Korica.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- The SEIAP, in collaboration with the Instituto de História Contemporânea, is organizing a second workshop entitled: The Road to Democracy in Southern Europe: The International Dimension. This will take place in Lisbon on 22nd November 2013.
- To mark its official launch, the SEIAP will host leading academics and policymakers at a day-long conference, followed by a public lecture with Dr Javier Solana entitled: The EU in the eye of the Storm on 14th October 2013. It will examine the shared economic and strategic challenges faced by crisis-stricken Southern Europe.
- The public seminar series 'History as a Burden to Shared History and Beyond' (January – March 2013) brought together historians and practitioners, with the aim of advancing the integration of historical legacy into contemporary experience as 'lessons of history'.
- The International Dimension of the Southern European Dictatorships workshop was held in June 2012 at the LSE. It examined the the Greek, Portuguese and Spanish authoritarian regimes in the early 1970s, and attracted several prominent international scholars as well as experts on the region.
- The Non Aligned Movement (NAM) conference, held in Belgrade (May 2012), successfully engaged established and younger scholars from around the world, who redressed the role and contribution of a unique Cold War alternative and Third World platform.
- In January 2012 'The Balkans 2020' workshop brought together 25 academic and experts from different fields, who examined the prospects for the region in 2020.

BRIEF SUMMARY

The LSE IDEAS Cold War Studies Programme (CWSP) is the main British centre for advanced study and research on the Cold War, its historical origins and its contemporary repercussions. The Programme concentrates its research on a series of programmes dealing with the Cold War in Europe and in the Third World. It cooperates closely with a number of academic and government institutions and other Cold War studies centres worldwide, notably in Washington, Moscow, Florence, Beijing, and Tokyo.

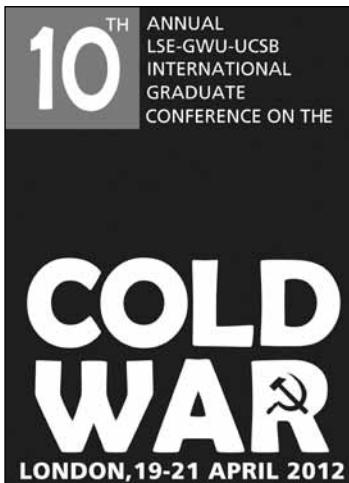

The CWSP attracts postgraduate students, postdoctoral associates, research fellows, and visiting scholars from Britain and abroad to study and conduct research in a unique interdisciplinary environment, and to work with international organisations, government institutions, and other agencies worldwide.

The CWSP has 39 Associates, including Prof Mary Elise Sarotte, Prof Mary Kaldor, Prof Georges-Henri Soutou and Prof Lord Peter Hennessy.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- In November 2013, the CWSP is to host a one-day conference encouraging academics and practitioners to explore the influence of the Cold War on the enlargement of the European Union and to discuss the future of EU enlargement. The event will be followed by a public lecture by former Prime Minister of Bulgaria Sergei Stanishev and the launch of the CWSP Special Report, 'The Crisis of EU Enlargement'.
- In March 2013, an international conference, 'Fifty Years without JFK: Rethinking Global Diplomacy', was jointly organised by the CWSP and the Institute for the Study of the Americas. Nine academics and nine PhD candidates from around the world shared their latest research on JFK's foreign policy. Invited speakers included Professor Sir Lawrence Freedman, Professor Matthew Jones, and Dr Andrew Preston.
- In October 2012, the CWSP organised a panel discussion to mark the 50th anniversary of the Cuban Missile Crisis, focusing on the seldom-heard Cuban perspective of the crisis. Speakers included Professor Carlos Alzugaray Treto (University of Havana), Professor Hal Klepak (Royal Military College of Canada), and Professor Antony Kapcia (Nottingham).

Negotiating While Fighting panel discussion. May 2012

- On 19-21 April 2012, the CWSP hosted the 10th Annual LSE-GWU-UCSB Graduate Conference on the Cold War. The foremost international conference on the Cold War and late 20th century international history, it showcased the work of 23 PhD students from across the world.
- In February 2012 Jorrit Kamminga, Director for Policy Research at the International Council on Security and Development (ICOS), introduced and discussed his film, 'Afghanistan, Land of Wonders' (2009).
- The panel discussion 'The Soviet Union's Collapse: Causes and Consequences' was held in January 2012. Panellists included Andrey Grachev, confidant of Mikhail Gorbachev, Sir Rodric Braithwaite, British Ambassador to Moscow from 1988 to 1992, and Prof Margot Light, LSE Professor Emeritus. Prof Michael Cox chaired the event.
- Other events included: a talk by Sarah Snyder on the influence of the 1975 Helsinki Final Act and the human rights movement that developed in its wake (October 2011); a round-table discussion with the FCO about James Hershberg's latest book 'Marigold', an in-depth account of one of the peace initiatives for the Vietnam War (May 2012); and the ongoing, bi-weekly seminar on the Cold War (HY510), organised in collaboration with the LSE Department of International History.

Publications

- 'The Crisis of EU Enlargement', LSE IDEAS Special Report, edited by CWSP Programme Assistant Luc-André Brunet (November 2013).
- CWSP Head of Programme N. Piers Ludlow co-edited the volume Visions of the End of the Cold War in Europe, 1945 - 1990, published by Berghahn Books.
- Sarah Snyder, long-time CWSP associate, published Human Rights Activism and the End of the Cold War: A Transnational History of the Helsinki Network with Cambridge University Press.
- Marie Julie Chenard, former CWSP Programme Assistant and current Deputy Head of the programme, published 'Seeking Détente and Driving Integration - The European Community's opening towards the People's Republic of China, 1975-1978' in the Journal of European Integration History (Jan 2012), and is publishing 'The Establishment of EC-PRC Diplomatic Relations, 1973-1975' in Pascaline Winand's edited volume The External Relations of the European Union with P.I.E. Peter Lang.
- Wes Ullrich, Pinto PhD Fellow, published 'Preventing 'Peace': The British Government and the Second World Peace Congress', Cold War History, Vol. 11.3 (August 2011).

Summer School

The third Cold War Summer School in Padova, Italy (September 2011) had 16 doctoral and postdoctoral scholars presenting their latest work in the field and debating its ramifications for international history, historiography and contemporary issues. Like the fourth Cold War Summer School (September 2012), the fifth (September 2013) is to be held in Trento, Italy.

Internet presence

In January 2013, the CWSP Blog was launched, allowing scholars and practitioners to share short analytical pieces on the Cold War and its legacy in contemporary affairs. In addition, RSS Feed enables the CWSP to promote information on coming events and newly published materials to subscribers. Video interviews are now integrated into our webpages, and podcasts from events allow for global dissemination.

FUNDING TO-DATE

CWSP has raised more than £29,500, including awards from the LSE Annual Fund of £ 21,476.

East Asia International Affairs

Professor Odd Arne Westad

BRIEF SUMMARY

The LSE IDEAS East Asia International Affairs Programme (EAIAP) studies the relationships among the three countries in the region (China, Japan and South Korea), as well as those between the region as a whole and the main outside powers. It seeks to discuss the changing nature of East Asia's international affairs dynamic through an active engagement with academics, practitioners and representatives from businesses and organisations within the region and elsewhere. Since its launch in 2010, the EAIAP has become one of the most prominent East Asia programmes in the UK, renowned for its sharp analyses and up-to-date coverage of regional affairs. The programme's research associates, who are among the very best regional experts in the UK, Europe and the East Asia region, provide a constant source of engagement for fruitful discussion. The EAIAP also hosts an advanced and unique training programme in international affairs for Chinese senior diplomats, which is supported by the British Foreign Office and the Chevening Foundation.

The EAIAP has 23 Associates, including Prof Shaun Breslin, Prof Françoise Godement, and Prof Rana Mitter.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- The workshop 'Is China Inc. Conquering the World?: The impact of Chinese Outward Investments to the World' eight industrial experts and veteran journalists, including former Head of UKTI Sir Andrew Cahn and former Guardian journalist Ms Isabel Hilton, and enjoyed lively discussions on each panel. (June, 2013)
- The workshop on Grand Strategy: China's Foreign Policy in a Changing Global Order was jointly hosted by the EAIAP together with the King's College China Institute, and was led by fifteen top experts on China, from both the UK and Europe. (January, 2012)
- The roundtable discussion on 'The Post Kim Jong-Il North Korea and Its Impacts on Regional Order' with Mr Aidan Foster-Carter was the first event related to North Korea organised by a UK-based think tank or research institution. (October 2012)
- The public lecture 'The End of the Party', given by Prof Rana Mitter from Oxford University, focused on the Ninety Year history of Chinese Communist Party and the challenges it faces in the future. (October 2011)
- Other events have included Jonathan Fenby's launch of his recent book 'Tiger Heads, Snake tails: China today, how it got there and where it is heading' (24 April 2012); and the public lecture on China's Geo-economic Strategy by Prof Arne Westad and Guy de Jonquieres. (May 2012)
- The roundtable discussion on China's New Leadership Hopes for Reform and Fear of Uncertainty was jointly organised by the EAIAP together with the Asia Research Centre. (February 2013)

Publications

The programme's Special Report on China's Geo-Economic Strategy was published in June 2012. The report assesses the primacy of economic interests in the China's foreign policy, analyses how China views the strategic dimensions of investments and trade, and whether the world really sees China having a coherent strategy. The Report has enjoyed its sweeping success and covered widely by media worldwide

The UK edition of Prof Arne Westad's book Restless Empire: China and the World since 1750 was launched on November 2012 with a public lecture at the LSE. In the book, Prof Westad argues that China's role in international affairs over the past 250 years has been determined by the country's restless irresolution as well as by its immense capacity for change.

The Chevening Scholar Programme

In September 2008, the Programme welcomed its first visiting fellows from the CCP Central Party School and the International Department of the Chinese Communist Party. Since then, fellows including Dr Liu Dong (CCP Party School), Ms Zhao Xuelan (MFA) and Mr Zhou Guo Hui (IDCPC) have been focusing their research on both Party diplomacy and China-Africa relations.

Internet presence

The Programme runs a very active and up-to-date blog, named Confuciana, which has been publishing three posts each month since it was first launched, in July 2011. Topics cover all major debates on what has happened in the region and beyond. The blog has become a major platform for debate on current affairs in the region.

FUNDING TO-DATE

The EAIAP has raised £173,237 including £99,737 from the ESRC for a 3-year project entitled China, Hong Kong, and the Long 1970s in Global Perspective.

BRIEF SUMMARY

The driving force behind the LSE IDEAS Latin America International Affairs Programme (LAIAP) is the realisation that both the Latin American chapter of the Cold War and the implications of the Cold War on the region continue to be fragmented areas of study, relatively neglected and waiting to be more fully explored. Building on LSE IDEAS' combined strengths in the study of International History and International Relations, the LAIAP aims to facilitate dialogue, stimulate research and overall promote a better understanding of the way in which Latin America's past impacts on its present. LAIAP accomplishes this through a set of activities that primarily focus on different types of events and a strong web presence. As a result, the programme has become a hub not only for LSE students and researchers with an interest in Latin America, but also within London.

LAIAP has 19 Associates, including Dr Gian Luca Gardini, Dr Guy Burton, Dr Tanya Harmer, and, Dr John Hughes.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

Each year LAIAP organizes various events, which largely fall into two categories: regular medium-sized events – primarily the IDEAS Latin America Research Seminars – and annual or biannual high-impact events – usually one- or two-day conferences. Both types of events seek to fulfil the LSE IDEAS purpose by creating forums for the discussion of international affairs research pertaining to Latin America and generating links between members of the broader Latin America research community and LSE IDEAS.

- The IDEAS Latin America Research Seminars are the LAIAP's flagship event series. During the Michaelmas and Lent Terms, Research Seminars take place on a weekly or bi-weekly basis and feature a wide-range of topics relating to the comparative politics and international affairs of Latin America. Presenters include both PhD students and faculty at LSE, as well as external speakers.
- The LAIAP organizes high-impact events on an annual or biannual basis. These are usually one- or two-day conferences that include a number of external participants and are funded through outside sponsorship. In 2011, LAIAP hosted the conference on Brazil and the Americas in the 21st Century, which was followed by a one-day workshop on Latin America in the 21st Century. In 2012 it co-organised the LSE Mexico Week, a four-day conference on the 2012 Mexican Federal Elections. The LAIAP also hosted UK-Argentina, Is There a Way Forward?
- In 2013, high impact events have included, Towards a Paradigm Shift in Latin American Migration and Asylum Policies? Argentina and Mexico in Comparative Perspective (January); The Challenges to the Democratization Process in Latin America (February); and New Directions in Latin American Integration: The Alianza Pacifico (March)

The Alianza Pacifico is an ambitious integration initiative between Colombia, Chile, Peru and Mexico, which was formally launched in June 2012. It aims to achieve the free flow of goods, investments, services and people among its members. All member countries have open economies and are committed to expanding trade relations, particularly with Asia. Amongst the Alliance's most innovative initiatives is the creation of a joint security system and a joint stock exchange among the member countries. The Alliance has been heralded as the most promising integration effort in Latin America of recent times, but will require sustained political will to move forward.

H.E. Mr Mauricio Rodríguez is Ambassador of Colombia to the United Kingdom.

Dr. Francisco Panizza is Head of the LSE IDEAS Latin America International Affairs Programme and a reader in the Department of Government at LSE.

THE POLITICS OF FINANCIAL CRISES
LESSONS ACROSS CONTINENTS

29 Nov 2012
Thursday 9:00-10:00

Conference Room
Arundel House

This event has been made possible with the kind support of:
LSE Government
LSE Annual Fund

DR. DAVID MORGAN
HON ROS KELLY

The current financial crisis in the developed world can be construed as the most recent wave of financial and sovereign debt crises that have affected different regions of the world over the past quarter century. Financial and sovereign debt crises cut across international and domestic politics and involve intense interactions between international and regional actors, governments, and citizens. While the economic factors behind financial crises are often similar, political responses tend to differ considerably.

This one-day event will bring together policy makers, practitioners and academics to discuss the politics of financial crises from a comparative perspective.

This event is FREE and open to the public.
Registration opens Friday 26 October 2012.
See LSE IDEAS website for details <http://lse.ac.uk/ideas>.

The separation of powers is an idea with ancient origins, but it is often thought of as a modern political principle. In the history of ideas, the separation of powers is a social scientific theory, arguing that it emerged with the growth of literacy because people could not remember the details of oral laws or oral contracts. By taking the separation of powers to be a social cognitive theory, Cameron argues that the separation of powers is a social cognitive theory that emerged with the growth of literacy because people could not remember the details of oral laws or oral contracts. By taking the separation of powers to be a social cognitive theory, Cameron argues that the separation of powers is a social cognitive theory that emerged with the growth of literacy because people could not remember the details of oral laws or oral contracts.

This book offers an insight into the social cognitive origins of the separation of powers and their social origins. It makes a contribution to the understanding of the separation of powers and its role in the development of modern constitutionalism. It also offers a new perspective on the separation of powers and its role in the development of modern constitutionalism.

Maxwell A. Cameron teaches at the University of Bristol, UK, and is the Director of the Centre for the Study of International Institutions, LSE. He is also a visiting professor at the University of Toronto, Canada.

LSE Ideas

Publications

The LAIAP provides updates on the publication of relevant books that seek to promote a better understanding of the region, as well as reviews of some of these works. The Programme also publishes regular news analyses, which have included topics on ‘Santos’ Colombia: Winds of Change Blowing from Bogotá’ and ‘Dangerous Relations: The Complicated Relationship between Chile and Peru’. In 2012, the LAIAP hosted three book launches: Fred Halliday’s Caamaño in London: The Exile of a Latin American Revolutionary; Tanya Harmer’s Allende’s Chile & The Inter-American Cold War; and, George Philip and Francisco Panizza’s The Triumph of Politics: The Return of the Left in Venezuela, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Internet presence

The LAIAP has a very strong web presence, based on three main virtual platforms. First, the LAIAP section of the IDEAS website is instrumental in promoting the programme’s upcoming events, as it is regularly updated. Second, the programme’s blog, Horizonte, has been refocused to offer its readers insightful analyses on current events in the region. In 2013, blog posts have included analyses on Uruguay’s culture of impunity continues to rear its head (February) and What is the crisis in public security in São Paulo? (March)

Finally, the extensive use of social media has allowed LAIAP not only to network and stand out among like-minded programmes, but also to reach a wider audience when promoting its events and publications.

FUNDING TO-DATE

The LAIAP has raised over £28,000, which includes £8,000 from the Government Department and £3,000 from the LSE Annual Fund.

BRIEF SUMMARY

The Russia Studies Programme (RSP) was set up at IDEAS in 2010 to study the history of Russia's international relationships, both regionally and globally. It seeks to discuss the nature of Russia's imperial international affairs with particular interest in the historical development of Russia's presence on the international stage and what it can tell us about the future; in analysing the links between the domestic and foreign affairs of the region and in looking at the interaction between different aspects of such relationships in the region: trade and technology, security and military strategy, and culture and 'soft power', among others. To promote this discussion, the RSP brings together interested parties through a number of academic associates, a Visiting Fellowship Programme and different types of events.

The RSP has thirteen Associates, including all former Paulsen Visiting Fellows.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- The RSP organises an annual lecture, with support from the Schapiro Fund. This is a public lecture given by a leading Russian historian, which focuses on a historical topic with contemporary relevance. The inaugural lecture Reflections on Russia's place in Europe in the 18th Century was given by Professor Aleksandr B. Kamenskii, from the Higher School of Economics, Moscow. (February 2012). The second lecture 'Russia and the First World War: Time to think again?' was given by Prof Dominic Lieven, co-Head of the RSP. (February 2013) Both were very successful events, with attendance of over 100 people, and recorded for the LSE's podcast series.
- In June 2013 the RSP organised a one-day conference on the domestic sources of Russian foreign policy and included specialists from LSE, think tanks and practitioners. It was followed by a public lecture Opening the Black Box on Russian Foreign Policy, with speakers including Fiona Hill, Director of the Center for United States and Europe at The Brookings Institute.

The Paulsen Fellowship Programme

Thanks to a generous donation from the Frederik Paulsen Foundation, the RSP established a five-year Visiting Fellowship Programme. It brings twenty early-career academic historians from a wide range of Russian universities, with particular emphasis on those from the regions, to study as Fellows at LSE IDEAS for a period of one to three months. These historians are working in the history of Russian international relations, diplomacy and strategy, broadly defined, between 1700 and 1917. The Programme is now in its fourth year and has already produced fourteen Fellows from universities all across Russia.

The Programme is endowed to allow Fellows to carry out their research in the UK, not only in the archives and libraries in London, but other repositories elsewhere in the UK. Fellows have therefore been able to make use of specific collections in Oxford, Cambridge, Edinburgh and Belfast. Other specialised institutions have also been an important aspect of certain projects, including LSE's own Gender Institute and the Women's Library in London to the British School Museum in Hitchin. Fellows have participated in conferences at LSE and attended IDEAS lectures and seminars. In addition, by providing them with a base within IDEAS, the Fellows are encouraged to meet and discuss their work with other young researchers.

Internet presence

The RSP's blog, Balalaika, offers in-depth analyses of current events pertaining to Russia, and providing specialised perspectives on their regional and international impact. Blog posts have included topics on:

- Russia and the First World War: time to think again?
- Gulag: what we know now and why it matters
- Russia's policy on the Syria crisis: sources and implications
- Russian Parliamentary Elections: a brief result overview
- Post-Bin Laden prospects for the peace process in Afghanistan

FUNDING TO-DATE

The RSP has raised £477,500 in total, of which £470,000 was provided by the Dr Frederik Paulsen Foundation.*

* Part of this generous endowment, which the programme still manages, was also reported in the 2009-2010 Annual Report.

BRIEF SUMMARY

The Southeast Asia International Affairs Programme (SEAIAP) aims to explore both the internal dynamics of the Southeast Asia region and the region's external relations with world powers, especially China and the US. The programme specifically focuses on: the regional integration in the context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN); the growing importance – both at a regional and at a global level – of the region's emerging economies and financial markets; the political changes and democratic transitions of Southeast Asian political systems and their international accountability; the region's diplomatic and strategic context. The programme's major purpose is to integrate the perspectives of scholars and practitioners in order to create a fertile environment of discussion regarding the abovementioned topics.

Guests and speakers at the SEAIAP events have included: Dr Bahtiar Effendy (political observer, lecturer at UIN Jakarta, and author of Islam and the State in Indonesia); Dr Marty Natalegawa

(Indonesian Minister of Foreign Affairs); Dr Dino Patti Djalal (author, activist, film producer, and former Indonesian ambassador to the United States); and Dr Maung Zarni (Burmese activist and 2011-13 Visiting Fellow in the Civil Society and Human Security Unit, Department of International Development, LSE) and Former US Presidential Candidate Senator John McCain.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- The Conference and Public Lecture 'Is ASEAN Still Relevant?' will take place on 4 December 2013.
- On 10 October 2012, the eve of a Presidential election and with the United States 'pivoting' to Asia, Senator John McCain of the US Senate's Armed Services Committee and the Republican Presidential candidate in 2008 addressed an LSE audience at the Shaw Library in 'A Conversation with Senator John McCain'. Visiting Senior Fellow Dr Munir Majid chaired the Q&A session.

- Dr Munir Majid's collection of essays 9/11 and the Attack on Muslims was launched in London on 13 November 2012 with an open discussion chaired by Prof Arne Westad. The book was also promoted by the Economists' Bookshop at the LSE campus.
- In 2011 the SEAIAP organised 7 events, including the seminar Is Myanmar Out of the Woods?; a seminar series on the Singapore elections, and 'Future Cities', a roundtable discussion organised in collaboration with the Malaysia Europe Forum on planning sustainable public transport systems in Southeast Asia.

Future Cities Seminar with the Malaysia Europe Foundation

Publications

- Dr Munir Majid's collection of essays 9/11 and the Attack on Muslims was launched in Kuala Lumpur on 16 July 2012 by H.R.H. the Crown Prince of the Malaysian state of Perak Raja Dr Nazrin Shah.
- Dr Majid has also contributed to other publications including 'Thinking the threat to Asia's rise' in Strategic Review, the Indonesian Journal of Leadership, Policy and World Affairs; and 'Going through the democratic motions in Southeast Asia' in International Politics.
- In November 2012, as ASEAN held its annual summit in Cambodia, LSE IDEAS published a report on The New Geopolitics of Southeast Asia. The contributors analysed the regional geopolitical situation and the Southeast Asian countries' relations with China and the US. It was featured on the Wall Street Journal blog. Prof Arne Westad, who contributed to the report, was quoted by the Financial Times on his views regarding ASEAN regional tensions.

Internet presence

The SEAIAP's brand as a dynamic platform for Southeast Asian international affairs is partly due to its extensive use of virtual tools and applications. The RSS Feed enables the programme to 'push' information on coming events and newly published materials to subscribers, while video interviews from events are now integrated into our website. Also, Podcasts from the events allow a wider dissemination amongst the public.

FUNDING TO-DATE

The SEIAP was funded by the Yayasan Albukhory Foundation, with a generous donation of £700,000 over a period of four years.*

United States International Affairs

Professor Mick Cox with Former US Secretary of State Madeleine Albright

BRIEF SUMMARY

The LSE IDEAS United States International Affairs Programme (USIAP) focuses on how the United States acts in the world, and in particular, the structural role of the United States in the current international system. In taking this systemic approach to the role of the United States, the programme's research will seek to move beyond the traditional distinction between 'hard' and 'soft' power and instead offer a more holistic understanding of American power, paying particular attention to the structural forces that underpin the United States' global role.

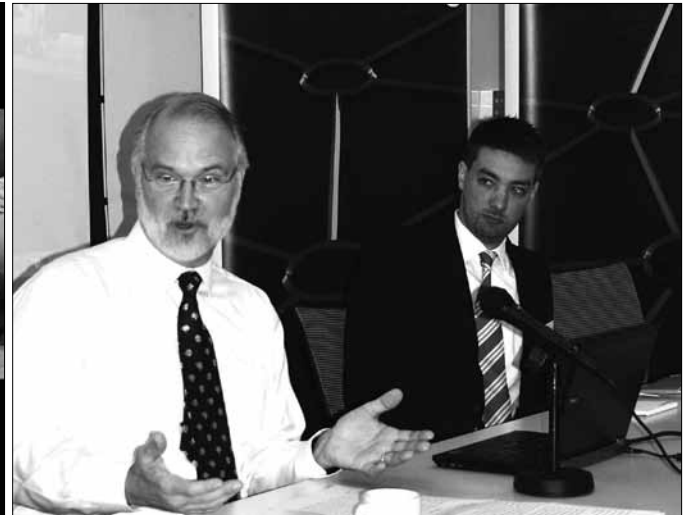

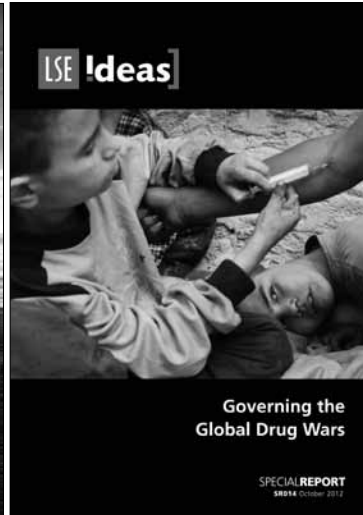

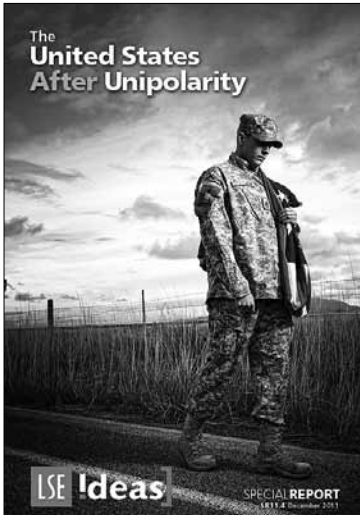

Formerly known as the Transatlantic Relations Programme, the United States International Affairs Programme was re-launched in May 2013. This change reflects the shifting strategic outlook in American foreign policy and will allow the programme to remain focused on the key questions driving contemporary foreign policy decision-making.

The USIA has 17 Research Associates, which are currently under review as the programme transition takes place. Past speakers at the programme's events have included: Madeleine Albright, David Trimble, John Ikenberry, Joseph Nye, Jim O'Neill, Arvind Subramanian, Jonathan Powell and Sir Hugh Orde.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- The ESRC Seminar on the Future of American Power, December 2013
- Conference with the Munk School and American University, America's Role in the World: Views from Europe, November 2013
- The United States International Affairs Programme was launched with an interdisciplinary international conference on 'American Structural Power' in May 2013, at which Professor Joe Nye gave the keynote public lecture. The research outputs are anticipated to form a special issue of International Politics in 2014.
- A seminar on 'The Future of Europe' was followed-up by a Special Report published by LSE IDEAS (October 2012)
- The conference on 'Governing the Global Drug Wars' and the eponymous IDEAS Special Report enjoyed great public success. (October 2012)
- Madeleine Albright, former US Secretary of State, gave a public lecture which marked the launch of an IDEAS Special Report, The US after Unipolarity. (December 2011)
- Other events have included: the conferences on 'Comparing Financial Crises' (October 2012) and 'Lessons of Northern Ireland' (May 2011); the seminars on 'US-Japan Alliance in the 21st Century, by Michael Cox and Matteo Dian (May 2011), and on 'Liberal Leviathan: the Origins, Crises and Transformation of the American World Order', by John Ikenberry; and the lecture on 'A World without Superpowers: De-centred Globalism' by Barry Buzan.

Middle East International Affairs

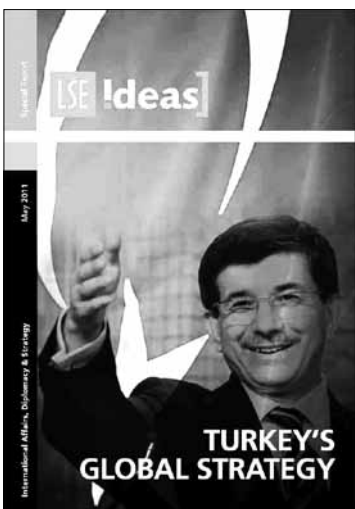

Head of Programme
Dr Toby Dodge

Dr Toby Dodge

Professor Giles Kepel

BRIEF SUMMARY

The Middle East International Affairs Programme (MEIAP) seeks to explicitly interact, from an academic perspective, with the major strategic issues facing the Middle East region over the medium term. At the moment these major issues include the aftermath of the Arab Spring, Iran's regional and international strategic ambitions, the evolution of Turkey's foreign policy, the future political trajectory of Iraq after regime change in 2003, and the final departure of US forces at the end of 2011. In order to achieve a deeper understanding of these topics, MEIA collaborates on an ongoing basis with LSE's newly established Middle East Centre. This partnership has proven very fruitful over the last two years, resulting in a very successful series of events co-organised and hosted by the two institutions.

HIGHLIGHTS

Events

- Prof Michael Cohen held a public lecture entitled 'Fighting World War Three from the Middle East'. (March 2011)
- MEIA jointly organised the one-day workshop on 'Democracy in the Arab World' together with the LSE Middle East Centre. (May 2011)
- Dr Mahdi Ahouie, from the University of Tehran gave a public lecture on 'Iranian Foreign Policy: Continuity and Change'. (June 2011)
- Other events have included a talk on 'Revisiting the 1973 Arab-Israeli War: Revelations from US Archives' given by Prof Nigel Ashton and Dr Roham Alvandi (November 2011); and the launch of Katerina Delacoura's book, Islamist Terrorism and Democracy in the Middle East. (October 2011)

Publications

- MEIA's Strategic Report on Turkey's Global Strategy, featuring the expert analyses of academics and policy practitioners, enjoyed a widespread success. (2011)
- The programme's blog, Shifting Sands, is a very active platform for strategic updates, situation analyses and book publication alerts. Some of the recent posts have included in-depth analyses on 'Oil dispute and ethno-politics in the Kurdish region of Iraq' (August 2012); 'Egypt's civil society crackdown: a test for US-Egyptian relations' (February 2012); 'Liberal interventionism after Libya: re-establishing credibility and deterrence' (September 2011)

FUNDING TO-DATE

The programme has raised a total of £7,954, of which the LSE Annual Fund contribution was £2,974.

Philippe Roman Chair

IN HISTORY AND INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

LSE IDEAS is proud to host the Philippe Roman Chair in History and International Affairs. Made possible by a private donation the Philippe Roman Chair is a one-year distinguished visiting professorship for leading scholars based outside the UK. The Philippe Roman Chair is awarded to a scholar and public intellectual of international repute, whose presence at the LSE will enhance the institutions standing in the competitive world of global higher education. In addition to conducting research and representing IDEAS and the LSE more broadly in public engagements, the Philippe Roman Chair teaches a unique postgraduate course of his/her design at the LSE.

TIMOTHY SNYDER

2013-14 PHILIPPE ROMAN CHAIR

Historian and award-winning author Professor Timothy Snyder will take up the Philippe Roman Chair in History and International Affairs for 2013-14.

Professor Snyder is currently the Bird White Housum Professor of History at Yale University, specialising in the political history of central and Eastern Europe as well as the Holocaust. A prolific author, he has written five award-winning books including Bloodlands: Europe between Hitler and Stalin, which has been awarded ten awards including the Emerson Prize in the Humanities and the Leipzig Award for European Understanding and was named on 12 book-of-the-year lists for 2010.

Professor Snyder said: 'I am delighted to be returning to the UK, where I earned my doctorate, and feel privileged to be joining colleagues whom I greatly admire at LSE.' Professor Arne Westad, director of LSE IDEAS, said: 'Tim Snyder has revolutionized our understanding of central and Eastern European history in the 20th century. It will be a privilege to have him teach here next year.'

Professor Snyder received his doctorate from the University of Oxford in 1997 where he was a British Marshall Scholar. He has held fellowships in Paris and Warsaw and Harvard, where he was an Academy Scholar, and is a frequent guest at the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna. He regularly takes part in conferences on Holocaust education and is a member of the Committee on Conscience of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum and sits on the advisory councils of the Yivo Institute for Jewish Research, the Association for Slavic, East European and Eurasian Studies. He is currently at work on two books, one a study of the Holocaust and the other a global history of Eastern Europe.

Professor Snyder will take up the post at LSE in October 2013 and will give four public lectures over the academic year on Eastern Europe and the World as well as conduct a postgraduate seminar series entitled 'The Holocaust as Global History'.

ANNE APPLEBAUM

2012-13 PHILIPPE ROMAN CHAIR

Author and Pulitzer Prize winner Anne Applebaum has taken up the post of Philippe Roman Chair in History and International Affairs at the School for 2012-13. She is the first woman to ever hold this position. Anne Applebaum is the Director of Political Studies at the Legatum Institute in London, and a columnist for the Washington Post and Slate. After graduating from Yale University, Anne Applebaum was a Marshall Scholar at both the LSE and St. Antony's College Oxford. She has also lectured at Yale and Columbia Universities, amongst others.

Anne Applebaum's journalistic work focuses on US and international politics, with a particular focus on economic and political transition. Her career began in 1989 at The Economist, where she covered the collapse of communism as the Warsaw correspondent. In 1993 she became the Foreign Editor, and then the Deputy Editor, of the Spectator magazine in London, and has also held the position of Political Editor of the Evening Standard. She has written columns for numerous British newspapers throughout her career, including The Guardian, Daily and Sunday Telegraphs, before joining the Washington Post in 2001.

Her recent and best known book, Gulag: A history, won the 2004 Pulitzer Prize for non-fiction, as well as Britain's Duff-Cooper Prize. Gulag: A history has appeared in over two dozen translations, including all major European languages. Her first book Between East and West: Across the Borderlands of Europe awarded her the Adolph Bentinck Special Mention Award in 1996. In 2010 in Budapest, she received the Petöfi Prize for promotion of freedom and democracy in Central Europe.

RAMACHANDRA GUHA

2011-12 PHILIPPE ROMAN CHAIR

Ramachandra Guha is the Philippe Roman Chair in History and International Affairs for the 2011-2012 academic year. Ramachandra Guha is a historian and biographer. He has taught at the universities of Yale and Stanford, held the Arné Naess Chair at the University of Oslo, and been the Indo-American Community Visiting Professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

His books include a pioneering environmental history, The Unquiet Woods (University of California Press, 1989), and an award-winning social history of cricket, A Corner of a Foreign Field (Picador, 2002). India after Gandhi (Macmillan/Ecco Press, 2007) was chosen as a book of the year by the Economist, the Washington Post, the Wall Street Journal, the San Francisco Chronicle, Time Out, and Outlook, and as a book of the decade in the Times of India, the Times of London, and The Hindu. Guha's books and essays have been translated into more than twenty languages. The New York Times has referred to him as 'perhaps the best among India's non fiction writers'; Time Magazine has called him 'Indian democracy's preeminent chronicler'.

Ramachandra Guha's awards include the Leopold-Hidy Prize of the American Society of Environmental History, the Daily Telegraph/ Cricket Society prize, the Malcolm Adideshiah Award for excellence in social science research, the Ramnath Goenka Prize for excellence in journalism, and the R. K. Narayan Prize. In 2008, Prospect and Foreign Policy magazines nominated Guha as one of the world's one hundred most influential intellectuals. In 2009, he was awarded the Padma Bhushan, the Republic of India's third highest civilian honour.

Kennedy is known for his writings on global politics, the influence of economics on grand strategies, and strategic issues. He is on the editorial board of numerous journals and writes for The New York Times and The Atlantic.

Diplomacy and International Strategy

SUMMARY

Since its inception in 2011, the Executive Masters Programme has attracted the best calibre of professionals in international affairs, defence, international business and finance. Designed for people who work full time, the programme is tailored for those who operate in high-pressure environments and with few time resources to spare. With the first intake of students graduating in Dec 2012, the Masters in Diplomacy and International Strategy is quickly gaining a reputation as one of the leading courses in strategic thinking in the world.

STUDENTS

The 43 students admitted in 2011 -12 and 2012-13 hail from both the public and the private sector. This balanced mix proves to be most stimulating when it comes to group discussion and the variations of views presented therein. The group of past and current students have included, amongst others:

- IN THE DIPLOMATIC SECTOR:

The British Ambassador to the UN in Geneva, The British Ambassador to Austria, senior diplomats from Brazil, Canada, Morocco, Thailand and the United States and a UN employee.

- IN THE WIDER PUBLIC SECTOR:

a member of the National Security Council Secretariat, a strategic policy maker from the Cabinet Office, the head of defence strategy at the UK Ministry of Defense, an adviser from Kazakhstan President's Office, an adviser from the Turkish Prime Minister's Office, defence officials from China and Japan and two officials from the Malaysian Ministry of International Trade and Industry and Ministry of Finance in Japan

- IN THE PRIVATE SECTOR:

Senior Managers from AXA, BG Group, the European Space Agency, the International Accounting Standards Board, Goldman Sachs, Ingersoll Rand and Lloyds, as well as an employee of Medecins sans Frontieres/MSF.

The LSE has built its global reputation by encouraging vigorous intellectual argument and informed debate. For a century or more the School has tried to remain true to its motto – understanding the causes of things.

Professor Michael Cox
Academic Director

STRUCTURE

The year-long programme consists of 4 intensive weeks of lectures and seminars spread throughout the year; 2 weekend policy workshops and 20 evening seminars. A vast range of highly experienced and well known academics and policy makers from the LSE, other universities, think tanks, international organisations and government departments both in the UK and abroad keep the course intellectually stimulating, topical and highly relevant.

CONTENT

The programme begins by taking a fresh look at the nature of strategy, explaining why new approaches are needed and offering a rigorous assessment of the assumptions that underpin strategy. This is followed by modules analysing the changing nature of strategic trends and power shifts with regard to different regions and institutions. The next modules focus on the different types of risks and threats that may occur in the decades ahead. Finally, there are a series of exercises aimed to transform strategy into practice.

QUOTES

The impact that the executive programme has had on the group is best expressed in students own words:

'Right from the first week, I was able to apply the lessons I had learnt to our operational and policy work and to coach my teams to look at issues differently.'

The British Ambassador to the UN in Geneva

'The course enables me to enhance my understanding of how international relations can affect the global economy, ultimately helping me make better investment decisions. Furthermore, as I am doing this MSc whilst working full time, I am able to leverage and immediately apply what I learnt. For example I was able to express sharper views on key global political issues, directly benefitting my team and our investment decision process.'

Fixed Income
Portfolio Manager

'This is a wise, timely and bold initiative by LSE IDEAS to train serious thinkers in how to make tomorrow's world more manageable.'

Staff Officer
Ministry of National Defence, PRC

'The course strikes an excellent balance between theory and practice, bringing together notable academics and eminent current and former practitioners. Another real strength is the varied composition of the participants, who bring together a thoroughly international mixture of public and private sector experience. I have found the course enormously valuable as a source of practical advice and ideas which I am feeding directly into the process of preparing for the next National Security Strategy and Strategic Defence and Security Review in 2015.'

Head of Defense Strategy and Priorities, UK MoD

'The course is highly practical and immediately applicable to what I do in my day job in global business development: the richly provocative insights into geopolitics and international strategy have transformed my perspective on how my industry operates.'

Senior Business Development Manager, BG Group

IDEAS Reports

Since March 2009, IDEAS has published 11 Strategic Updates and 15 Special Reports.

These publications have covered major international affairs issues around the world, from the Global Drug Wars to the Geopolitics of Southeast Asia; from the UK's Defence Review to the Arab Spring. IDEAS Reports have been a vehicle for knowledge exchange and impact with significant reach and significance. Their findings have on occasion generated controversy in the media both in the UK and internationally, most notably following assessments of India and Turkey, and have stimulated and informed debate among policymakers both within the UK Parliament and foreign policy apparatus, and at the level of international institutions, including ASEAN and the UN. IDEAS Reports are made freely available online, and are also distributed in hard copy and through Amazon's kindle store.

COLD WAR HISTORY

The leading journal in its field, Cold War History has now entered its second decade. It continues to publish groundbreaking articles by top experts as well as by emerging talents. Articles published in 2012 include: Hal Brands, 'Saddam Hussein, the United States, and the Invasion of Iran: Was there a green light?'; Antony Best, 'We are virtually at war with Russia: Britain and the Cold War in East Asia, 1923-1940'; Holger Nehring and Benjamin Ziemann, 'Do All Paths Lead to Moscow? The NATO Dual-Track Decision and the Peace Movement'; Dandan Zhu, 'The Hungarian Revolution and the origins of China's Great Leap policies, 1956-57'; Asa McKercher, 'The most serious problem? Canada-US relations and Cuba, 1962'; Antonio Varsori, 'Italy and the end of Communism in Albania, 1989-1991'; Tanya Harmer, 'Brazil's Cold War in the Southern Cone, 1970-1975'.

Articles for the journal are regularly reviewed in H-Diplo, a leading network dedicated to diplomatic history and international affairs. In 2012 the journal published two online Special Issues that consolidated the journal's most significant work on the Cold War in China and Germany. A Special Issue entitled 'Radio Wars: Broadcasting during the Cold War' was released in the Spring of 2013 and launched with a public event at LSE.

Cold War History has increased its selectivity and continues and continues to work successfully with its publisher, Taylor and Francis. In 2012 the journal officially moved to a new referencing style which has made the journal more accessible for academic historians. Journal articles are also available and citeable online in advance of print publication through the iFirst system.

INTERNATIONAL POLITICS

Edited by Professor Michael Cox of IDEAS and managed by Dr Fiona Stephen, International Politics is a leading peer reviewed journal dedicated to the scholarly study of transnational issues and global problems. It defines itself as critical in character, truly international in scope, and totally engaged with the central issues facing the world today. In keeping with IDEAS' interdisciplinary approach, it provides a global forum for a rapidly expanding community of scholars from a range of academic backgrounds.

In the last few years International Politics has published some outstanding Special Issues on Historical Sociology and International Relations; Russia in the World; Critical IPE; IR and the end of the Cold War; Liberal Internationalism; and Obama and The United States. In 2013 the journal also examined the legacy of Ken Waltz and published a Special Issue devoted to the history of Realism. Leading scholars recently appearing in the journal include John Ikenberry, Justin Rosenberg, Brian Schmidt, William Wohlforth, Thomas Risse, Tony Smith, Ian Clark, Robyn Eckersley, Robert Kagan, Randall Collins, Tim Dunne, Henry Nau, Barry Buzan, Margot Light, Chris Reus-Smit, Amitai Etzioni, Mary Kaldor, John Micklethwait, Dan Deudney, Mary Sarotte, Christopher Layne, Andrew Linklater and Richard Ned Lebow. The journal also encourages contributions from doctoral students, young scholars and policy-makers.

CHANGING THE EUROPEAN DEBATE DAHRENDORF SYMPOSIUM

The Dahrendorf Symposium is an initiative of the LSE, the Hertie School of Governance, and Stiftung Mercator. The objective of the Dahrendorf project is to shine a light on how academia can have a productive influence on socio-political discourse. It aims to offer European perspectives on some of the most pressing global challenges of our time. It seeks to produce academically sound reflections that will stimulate public debate and serve as the basis for concrete policy proposals on the European and global stage.

Prof Michael Cox was a convener of the 2011 Dahrendorf Symposium on 'Changing the Debate on Europe: Moving beyond Conventional Wisdoms'. Prof O. Arne Westad was the Academic Co-director of the Dahrendorf Symposium 2013 on 'Changing the European Debate: Focus on Climate Change', and the Chair of the Dahrendorf Working Group 'Europe and the World'.

HIGHLIGHTS

- The 2011 Dahrendorf Symposium on 9-10 November 2011 at the Berlin-Brandenburg Academy of Science. Speakers included Mario Monti, Dr Norbert Roettgen, Professor Timothy Garton Ash, and Sylvie Goulard.
- 'Europe in Crisis' seminar on 10 October 2012 convened by LSE IDEAS. Participants included Professor Mary Kaldor, Professor Karen Smith, and Professor Simon Hix.
- 'EU and China: The Political Game' seminar on 6 June 2013 convened by LSE IDEAS East Asia International Affairs Programme and Dahrendorf Working Group 5 'Europe and the World'. Participants included Dr Jing Men, Dr Lirong Liu, Guy De Jonquières, and Robert Cooper.
- The Dahrendorf Symposium 2013 on 14-15 November 2013 at the Academy of the Arts, Berlin. Speakers included Professor Craig Calhoun, Klaus Toepfer, Professor Conor Gearty, and Professor Senem Aydin Duezgit.

EUROPE 2025 TOWARDS A NEW NARRATIVE AND INSTITUTIONAL DESIGN INNOVATIONS

Europe 2025 is an initiative of the Nicolas Berggruen Institute on Governance and the Hertie School of Governance, supported by the LSE and Sciences Po Paris. It aims at proposing new avenues for a revitalized narrative for Europe in the 21st century and at suggesting design innovations for connecting Brussels with the European citizen. It does so by bringing public policy students together with policy-makers from across Europe. This dialogue will allow these future policy makers to in-fuse the debate on Europe with their analytical skills, applied and international perspectives and, above all, their bold political imagination. In the long run, this initiative works towards building a European political public sphere, broadening political participation and increasing oversight and accountability in the EU. LSE IDEAS recruited Master students from the LSE International History Department and the LSE European Institute. LSE IDEAS helped with the promotion of the student's surveys via its social media.

HIGHLIGHTS

- Blog and Online Survey <http://eu2025.wordpress.com/>
- 'Europe: Next Steps' Paris Townhall on 28 May 2013 convened by the Berggruen Institute on Governance. Speakers included Jacques Delors, Pascal Lamy, Martin Schulz. Students presents the results of the Europe 2025 initiative on one panel.
