

Department of International Development

LSE Graduate Teaching Assistant (SB05) (17.5 hours per week)

£27,394 - £32,333 per annum inclusive (pro rata)

The Department of International Development is looking for a GTA to contribute to teaching on "Development Management" (DV431). The course explores why some countries are rich and others poor, why some places are better governed and others poorly governed, and why some institutions well serve public interests while others do not. A description of the course is available at <http://www.lse.ac.uk/internationalDevelopment/study/MScDevelopmentManagement.aspx>

You will demonstrate the ability to contribute to the above course. You should be at an advanced stage of completing a PhD in international development or a related field. Having some experience of conducting independent research on a developing country would be an advantage.

Previous teaching experience, particularly in an interdisciplinary course on international development or political economy, would be desirable.

The other criteria that will be used when shortlisting for this post can be found on the person specification which is attached to this vacancy on the LSE's online recruitment system.

The post will commence on 3rd October 2016 and will be for one year in the first instance, with the possibility of renewal.

In addition to a good salary the benefits that come with this job are generous annual leave and excellent training and development opportunities.

Further information on the post can be found at

<http://www.lse.ac.uk/internationalDevelopment/news/Home.aspx>

To apply for this post, please send a CV and expression of interest to p.campbell1@lse.ac.uk

The closing date for the receipt of applications is 29 July 2016 (23.59 UK time). Regrettably, we cannot accept any applications received after this date.

We value diversity and wish to promote equality at all levels