

July 2016

Dear IPE Masters Student

You should by now have received the formal conditional or unconditional offer of a place on the MSc International Political Economy (IPE) or MSc IPE (Research) programme for the coming academic session. Congratulations and welcome!

I'm writing to give you some further information about the programme. It is not part of the 'official' offer of admission to the School, but rather some additional background detail on the programme arrangements from the Department, so that you can make any necessary preparations.

Studying at the LSE

As you probably know, the London School of Economics and Political Science is one of the world's leading social science institutions. Many influential developments in thinking about society, economics and politics have originated in work done here. The International Relations Department is now in its 89th year and was established to address the major intellectual challenges posed by international relations. In addition to providing teaching at BSc, MSc and MPhil/PhD levels, the Department serves as a focus for international relations research both in the UK and internationally. The IPE Masters programme is one of the first such programmes established.

Your programme will include students from a wide range of academic, cultural and linguistic backgrounds. Some have had training in International Relations, some in economics and some in history or other related fields. The programme will allow you to specialise in international political economy. Most of the teaching will be given in the Department of International Relations, the core course and options being taught by the members of the Department who specialise in international political economy.

We deliberately restrict the number of students on the MSc as we value the direct contact between students and staff. Competition for places is very intense and we are very proud of our graduates. Alumni of the MSc work in international organisations, government departments, regulatory bodies, business and industry, regulated industries, various non-governmental organisations, consultancies and academia.

The LSE system may be very different to what you have hitherto experienced. Pedagogy works in three parts: lectures, seminars and independent study. Assessment includes both essays and written examinations.

The MSc IPE Programme

The structure of the degree for students on the MSc International Political Economy programme is as follows:

- A compulsory core paper, International Political Economy (IR470), a half unit course (H) that runs in the Michaelmas Term
- Two optional papers from a number of subjects in IPE or taught in the International Relations Department. These may be full unit or a combination of half unit courses
- A compulsory 10,000-word dissertation (IR499)

You can access the 2016/17 programme regulations for MSc IPE at the end of August 2016.

For further information about courses for the MSc IPE programme, including detailed descriptions of the content, some suggested readings and methods of assessment, please see the online Graduate Course Guides 2015/16. (These will be updated for 2016/17 at the end of August 2016.)

The MSc International Political Economy (Research) Programme

The structure of the degree for students on the MSc IPE (Research) programme is as follows:

- A compulsory core paper, International Political Economy (IR470)(H)
- A compulsory methods paper, Foundations of Social Research (Quantitative Analysis, Fundamentals of Research Design, Qualitative Research) taught by the Methodology Department
- An optional paper from a number of subjects taught in the International Relations Department. This may be a full unit or a combination of half unit courses
- A compulsory 10,000-word dissertation (IR499)

You can access the 2016/17 programme regulations for MSc IPE (Research) at the end of August 2016.

For further information about courses for the MSc IPE (Research) programme, including detailed descriptions of the content, some suggested readings and methods of assessment, please see the online Graduate Course Guides 2015/16 for 2016/17. (These will be updated for 2016/17 at the end of August 2016.)

Background Reading

If you have not already read widely in the subject, we would suggest the following books as preparatory reading:

- Frieden, Jeffrey, Lake, David and Broz, J. Lawrence (eds.) (2010). International Political Economy. 5th edition. W.W. Norton
- Gilpin, Robert (2001). Global Political Economy: Understanding the International Economic Order. Princeton University Press
- Oatley, Thomas (2012). International Political Economy: Interest and Institutions in the Global Economy. 5th edition. Pearson Longman
- Ravenhill, John (ed.) (2011). Global Political Economy. 3rd edition. Oxford
- Walter, Andrew and Sen, Gautam (2009). Analyzing the Global Political Economy. Princeton University Press

When you have registered for the programme (see below) you will also be able to see the reading lists for the options courses, which generally have suggestions for core texts.

As this literature indicates, the subject of international political economy, while drawing upon economic theories and concepts, focuses mainly upon the politics of economic policies and outcomes at the global level. The MSc IPE/IPE (Research) is not a degree in economics, though we assume that you already have some background in international economics. If you feel you need to do some reading in international economics, some students have in the past found the following books to be helpful:

- Caves, Richard E., Frankel, Jeffrey A. and Jones, Robert W. (2006). World Trade and Payments
Krugman, Paul, Obstfeld, Maurice and Melitz, Marc (2011). International Economics: Theory and Practice

However, we will not utilise these economics texts in either of the programmes; nor are you required to master them. We also provide a set of lectures on international economics in Michaelmas Term for those students with little or no previous background in the subject or in need of refreshment.

Choosing your Optional Courses

Browsing:

- Graduate Course Guides

You should give some preliminary thought to which optional courses you wish to pursue. We suggest that you look at the online Graduate Course Guides 2015/16 which lists all courses on offer and a 'Course Guide' for each. (These will be updated for 2016/17 at the end of August 2016.) Under each Course Guide you will find details regarding course availability, content, teaching hours, assessment method(s) and recommended reading.

- Moodle

Once you have registered with the School, you will be able to access 2015/16 reading lists and/or, when they are ready, 2016/17 reading lists via the School's virtual learning environment called 'Moodle'.

- Teaching Timetable

It is advisable to consult the online Teaching Timetable to view all lecture and seminar term-time teaching before deciding which courses to take, in order to avoid any timetable clashes. (The teaching timetable will be updated for 2016/17 by mid-August.)

Signing up:

LSE for You (LfY)

Signing up for your optional courses is undertaken via LSE for You (LfY). For further details please read the information on the School's Graduate Course Choice website.

Although it will be possible to access the online seminar sign-up software from Monday 19 September for browsing purposes, course selection goes live on Friday 23 September 2016. As MSc seminar teaching in the International Relations Department does not begin until week 2 of MT at the earliest, we would encourage you not to finalise your selections until the end of the first week of teaching when you have had a chance to sample lectures for the courses you are interested in. [Note: Our own deadlines may differ from those of other departments, so if you wish to register for a non-IRD option, you should check with the department concerned to ensure that you do not miss their deadline.]

Please do not worry unduly about choosing options at this stage - everything will be explained fully at the orientation meeting on Thursday 22 September 2016.

The following IPE optional course will be available in 2016/17:

- IR447 Political Economy of International Labour Migration (H)
- IR453 Global Business in International Relations (H)
- IR454 Governing International Political Economy: Lessons from the Past for the Future (H)
- IR455 Economic Diplomacy (H)
- IR467 International Political Economy of the Environment (H)
- IR468 The Political Economy of Trade (H)
- IR469 Politics of Money in the World Economy (H)

The following IR optional courses will not be available in 2016/17:

- IR419 International Relations of the Middle East
- IR431 European Union Policy Making in a Global-Context (H)
- IR439 Diplomacy (H)
- IR445 China and the World
- IR461 Islam in International Relations: From Al-Andalus to Afghanistan
- IR462 Introduction to International Political Theory (H)
- IR463 The International Political Theory of Humanitarian Intervention (H)
- IR464 The Politics of International Law (H)
- IR465 The International Politics of Culture and Religion
- IR482 Russia and Eurasia: Foreign and Security Policies

Arrival

We very much hope that you will be joining us in London next academic year. Meanwhile, we strongly recommend that you consult the ‘Frequently asked questions \(FAQS\) for offer holders and current students’ on our departmental web pages for further information about the Department and your arrival.

Please see below for information regarding the status of your offer, registration arrangements and programme orientation meetings.

Yours sincerely

Professor Peter Trubowitz
Head, International Relations Department

Status of Offer

If you have not already done so, please check the status of your offer on your application tracker. If you are required to meet conditions of your offer by registration time, we recommend you submit the relevant documents to the Graduate Admissions Office (GAO) as soon as possible. You should also ensure you have submitted your offer reply and financial undertaking forms to the GAO. Please contact the GAO if you have any queries about this.

MSc IPE/IPE (Research) Programme Registration

Monday 19 September 2016, Hong Kong Theatre, Clement House, 2.00-2.30 pm

In order to become an official student of the LSE, you must register in person at the School. When registering, you will be issued with an identity card which provides, amongst other things, access to your library account. You will find information on all aspects of registration, on the School's New Student Programme Registration website.

If you are unable to register on the date and time specified for your programme, you should read the information on the Graduate Programme Registration website under 'What can I do if I miss my scheduled registration time?' If you are unable to attend registration on the alternative dates/times provided then you must contact Martina Langer (m.langer@lse.ac.uk), IPE Programme Administrator, immediately, stating your reasons.

MSc IPE/IPE (Research) Programme Orientation Meeting

MSc IPE/IPE (Research): Thursday 22 September 2016, 11.00-12.00, room CLM 6.02

LSE-Sci. Po. Double Degree: Thursday 22 September 2016, 09.00-09.30, room CLM 1.02

Term begins on Thursday, 22 September 2016 and is also the day of your orientation meeting. It is very important to attend your orientation meeting as the structure of your programme and administrative arrangements will be explained at this time. You will also meet the Deputy Head of Department (Teaching and Learning) and your Programme Director.

Double Degree students: Please attend either the MSc IR or MSc IPE meetings, depending on your choice of programme.

Academic Adviser Appointments

You will be provided with information regarding the allocation of Academic Advisers, and meetings with your Academic Adviser will take place the following week. All will be explained at the meeting.

Teaching begins in Week 1: Monday 26 September 2016
