

Wine into ink

Department- Estates Division

Project Area- Waste

Summary- You may be familiar with the water into wine story, but water into ink is probably a new one on you? The Waste and Procurement Sustainability Officer made good use of some crates of wine which had been discovered in a closed room and were no longer drinkable. After some investigation 'The Foraged Book Project' and artist James Wood were discovered, James was keen to take the wine and use it in his ink-making workshop. The glass bottles would also be used in the construction of a clay oven he was planning to build. All elements were therefore reused in some way showing how ingenious you can be with reuse!

