

LSE Widening Participation and your data: overview statement Year 9 and above

This is an overview of how LSE Widening Participation will collect, store and use your data. For full information and details, please see [insert link to full statement].

Why do you collect my data, and how will you use it?

The LSE Widening Participation team collects data about participants on our projects to help us target our work, run our projects safely, evaluate the impact of our projects and track long-term outcomes of the young people we work with.

We'll analyse data from everyone who participated in our projects and publish reports based on this data. It will never be possible to identify individuals, including you, in these reports.

For evaluation purposes only, we might share some data about you with public bodies such as national statistics organisations like the Higher Education Statistics Agency or university sector bodies like UCAS or the Higher Education Access Tracker (HEAT). We might also share it with our undergraduate admissions team at LSE so they know that you've worked with us if you choose to make an application to LSE.

Any data you've previously shared with the LSE Widening Participation Team will also be covered by these conditions from now on.

How will you store and protect my data?

Your data will be safely held on a secure database in compliance with the Data Protection Act and the General Data Protection Regulations. We'll keep your data until you're 27 years old, so that we can evaluate the long-term impact of our projects, and then delete any identifying information.

What if I don't want to share my data?

We need certain pieces of data for contractual, legal or research reasons but can delete other data we hold about you: contact widening.participation@lse.ac.uk if you want to do this.

If you have any questions or concerns, or would like a copy of the data that we hold about you, please contact Rachael Maguire by email: r.maguire@lse.ac.uk or by telephone: 020 7849 4622.

Declaration

LSE Widening Participation will use your data to run and evaluate its programmes, and will share it with key partners to support long-term research and evaluation. This does not affect your rights to access the data held about you, to have it corrected or to withdraw your consent to marketing.

Please tick the following boxes to let us know how we can use your data. You can tick all, some, or none of the boxes.

[Paper forms only: I have read how LSE Widening Participation will use my data]

I consent to receive communications from LSE Widening Participation about opportunities that may be of interest to me.

I consent to receive communications from other parts of LSE about opportunities that may be of interest to me, such as open days or subject taster days.

Photo consent

The Widening Participation team and/or other departments at LSE may take photographs or video of you while attending the programme, and use these for publicity. This might include (but is not limited to) using them in our printed and online publicity, social media and press releases.

We might also share photos or videos with other students who are on the project with you.

Please tick the following boxes to let us know if you give consent for us to use your photos. You can tick all, some or none of the boxes.

I consent for LSE to share photos or videos they take of me with other participants on my project

I consent for LSE to use photos or videos they take of me for marketing and publicity as described above.
