

'The degree has a strong reputation in the eyes of employers for its robust international standing and rigorous curriculum'.

Vernon Lim

Profile: Vernon Lim | BSc Business graduate

'The University of London has established itself as a world renowned institution that has provided a quality education for many of its graduands. Many have gone before me, armed with a University of London degree, eventually securing for themselves good careers and a promising future. Hence, choosing to obtain a degree from the University of London was an intuitive thing to do.

I enjoyed the degree programme for its strong academic focus which aimed to provide depth in learning, which I found particularly useful in my career. Also, the exams were designed in a manner which rewarded students with good marks where they were able to express their opinions constructively instead of simply regurgitating information.

Being in the financial industry, the learning curve is steep, and I have to constantly keep myself abreast with financial news. My course has conditioned me in a manner to be able to process information quickly and use it to my advantage. Secondly, my business degree has sharpened my problem-solving and quantitative skills to a large extent, skills that are highly prized in my area of work and the financial world in general.

The degree programme provides a depth of knowledge that is unparalleled. It equips graduates with a solid understanding in whatever subjects they have chosen to pursue. Also, the degree has a strong reputation in the eyes of employers for its robust international standing and rigorous curriculum. The University of London brand is a trusted one that adds gloss to the résumé of graduates.'

Vernon now works for a major bank where his role involves managing a portfolio and assisting entities with their financing needs.