

Executive MBA students visit LSE

Insights into global markets for students from Chile

LSE's programme for Executive MBA students at the Universidad Adolfo Ibáñez (UAI) in Chile focused on commercial and financial strategies, with a specific emphasis on the global financial crisis.

Six LSE academics and an array of external experts gave specialised lectures on topics including Corporate Finance and Strategy, Emerging Markets, and the Transatlantic Economic Relationship, all designed to cultivate a global perspective on the causes and consequences of the economic crisis. As the participants were all senior-level professionals with extensive backgrounds in economics, each session attempted to bring innovative thinking to real world management situations. Students also had the opportunity to visit the House of Lords and a leading financial services company.

The week concluded with a reception and certificate presentation ceremony at the residence of the Chilean Ambassador, Mr Tomás Müller. After presenting the participants with their certificates, LSE Provost Stuart Corbridge commented on the relationship between LSE and UAI, and LSE's commitment to Latin American engagement, stating, "I think there's a lot in common between the two institutions. We hope that many more students from Latin America will come to LSE and we expect in that process to learn as much from you as we hope you've learnt from us."

At a glance

Participants: 42

Participant level: Executive MBA

Duration: 1 week

Location: London

