* Figures correct as of 1 July 2007.

** General Course students typically take four examinations. The figures show the grade distribution of their exam marks, a total of 1285 papers, in June 2007.

*** BSc/BA degrees: these are the end-of-year final exam grades achieved in 11464 examination papers taken by all other LSE undergraduates at levels 2 and 3 on all of the School's three-year specialist degrees. The great majority of such undergraduates took four examination papers. Their generally higher grades (especially at the upper end of the mark range) probably reflect the fact that these LSE students are specialising in their major field, whereas the General Course students typically select a much wider variety of courses.
