

AMERICAN POLITICS ON THE EVE OF THE 2016 US ELECTIONS

Thursday 16 June 2016

Delivered in partnership with LSE's Department of International Relations, the 2016 conference will lead pupils through an engaging programme of lectures and seminars.

You'll have the opportunity to hear from leading academic specialists about the implications of the upcoming November 2016 presidential elections in the United States, both for American politics and society, and for US foreign policy and key regions of the world like the Middle East and the Asia-Pacific.

On the day you will:

- have the opportunity to question leading academics
- take part in lively seminar sessions
- learn more about LSE admissions
- talk with current LSE undergraduates about student life.

If you are interested in applying please speak to your Head of Year 12. Information on eligibility criteria and the application form can be found at www.lse.ac.uk/year12politicsconference

If you have any questions please contact Sophia Mousoulides on 020 7955 7003.