NATIONAL IMPLEMENTATION PROGRAM of the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security for 2018-2021

Chapter I CURRENT SITUATION AND PROBLEM IDENTIFICATION

- 1. The Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security unanimously adopted by the United Nations Security Council on October 31st, 2000 (hereinafter Resolution 1325) is the first international document that highlights the impact of conflicts on adult and young women, recognizing their significant role in establishing peace and ensuring security. The Resolution is mandatory for the all UN-state members, without extra ratification.
- 2. The Resolution 1325 requires all the actors to protect women's rights, prevent violence against adult and young women, take into account their necessities and priorities and involve them in the processes of conflict prevention and settlement, as well as post-conflict reconstruction. The Resolution 1325 foresees gender perspective in peace operations, increases the women's role and contribution especially as military observers, civil police and the human rights and humanitarian personnel.
- 3. For the first time, the Republic of Moldova engaged to implement the Resolution 1325 within the Individual Partnership Action Plan (IPAP) Republic of Moldova NATO for 2014-2016, where it has assumed the responsibility to take actions for the implementation of the UN Security Council Resolution 1325. The Individual Partnership Action Plan (IPAP) Republic of Moldova NATO for 2017-2019, approved by the Government Decision no.736 on September 13th, 2017, ensures the continuity of this commitment and establishes the action related to the cooperation on implementation the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security. The strategy on ensuring equality between women and men in Moldova for 2017-2021, approved by the Government Decision no. 259 on April 27th, 2017, establishes that one of the general objectives is the promotion of gender equality in the security and defense sector.
- 4. The above mentioned are important prerequisites for the adoption of a National Program for the Implementation of the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security for the years 2018-2021 (hereinafter referred to as the National Program).
- 5. The basis for the elaboration of the National Program and the Action Plan for its implementation in the Republic of Moldova was the inter-institutional self-evaluation on the gender dimension within the national security and defense sector during the period 2015-2016, carried out with the support of UN Women in Moldova, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and the Institute for Inclusive Security (ISI), Washington DC, United States of America. The draft of the National Plan of the Republic of Moldova for implementing UN Security Council Resolution 1325 on the role of Women in Peace and Security was launched On October 6th, 2016, and implemented by the Ministry of Defense of the Republic of Moldova in collaboration with the Institute for Inclusive Security and the NATO Center for Information and Documentation in the Republic of Moldova (NATO IDC) through the NATO Peace and Security Program (SPS). The main objective of the project was to assist the Government of the Republic of Moldova as well as representatives of civil society in developing an interinstitutional national strategy for the implementation of Resolution 1325.
- 6. At the same time, since 2015, a series of dialogues, roundtables and meetings have been held to increase the level of awareness of public authorities' representatives and civil society with the provisions of Resolution 1325. These events, attended by civil servants, women deputies, members of the Common Platform of Dialogue in the Parliament of the Republic of Moldova, activists in the field of gender equality, national and international experts etc., have created an appropriate framework to initiate the elaboration of the National Program.

- 7. The analysis of women's participation in the security and defense sector highlighted two significant issues: 1) the low representation rate of women in this sector, and 2) the fact that the sector is not sufficiently inclusive.
- 8. Thus, there are 8 identified barriers that reduce the representation and influence of women in the security and defense sector (described below).

Barrier 1. Gender stereotypes persist within the sector (and outside it) about women's participation in the security and defense sector

- 9. The areas of security and law enforcement are perceived as masculine. Approximately 20% of citizens believe that security sectors jobs are better suited to men. As for the Army, the ratio of those who believe that the Army is a sector for men only is higher than the proportion of those who choose for equal representation of women and men.
- 10. Working in the Police is perceived as the most dangerous occupation, and at the same time, the majority of people consider it to be suitable for both men and women. The perceived degree of danger of serving in the National Army is considered to be lower, and at the same time these jobs are considered less suitable for a fair representation of women.
- 11. Generally, citizens consider that enlisting more women in the security and defense sector would add value to it, increase the trust of the population and improve the working process. The most obvious benefits are related to fighting corruption and maintaining public order.

Barrier 2. The security and defense sector does not allow men and women to combine work and family life

- 12. The most important barrier which determines women's underrepresentation in the security and defense sector is the burden of domestic responsibilities. Other reasons for underrepresentation of women are psychological: women's self-confidence and also the fact that the sector is dominated by men and would be unfriendly and closed for women.
- 13. There are no specific policies to support the balance between work and personal life of employees in the sector.

Barrier 3. The security and defense sector has no full capacity to prevent and fight discrimination, sexual harassment and gender-based violence

- 14. Internal mechanisms for preventing and fighting harassment, discrimination and violence in the security and defense sector need to be more effective. At the moment, there are no comprehensive strategies to prevent sexual harassment and sexual abuse in the National Army and other security and defense institutions. However, there are programs related to the prevention of sexual harassment. This topic is included in the annual training program for military personnel.
- 15. In addition, the Armed Forces personnel assigned to participate in missions are trained to adopt specific behavior in relation to women. This implies a set of rules and requirements that must be followed to avoid accusations of sexual harassment. Although there are no designated persons dealing with the investigation of sexual harassment, there are formal procedures that can be used by victims to report harassment.
- 16. Increasing the number of women in the security and defense sector without providing internal procedures for preventing and fighting discrimination and sexual harassment involves significant risks. The persistence of gender stereotypes and the specificity of Armed Forces structures that are more or less closed, determine the need for men's psychological training in accepting women in the sector, which will reduce the risk of discrimination and sexual harassment.

Barrier 4. The security and defense sector does not have an inclusive and proactive human resource management system

- 17. With the exception of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, a proactive effort to hire women in the security and defense sector is basically missing.
- 18. For the most part, the reasons why women tend to leave the structures of the Armed Forces and other security and defense institutions are the difficulties in balancing work and family life, retirement and wage size or health.

Barrier 5. The security and defense sector does not apply reasonable adaptation and positive measures to allow a wider representation of women

- 19. The physical training requirements are not fully justified. These requirements are different for men and women within military training.
- 20. Physical infrastructure is not adjusted to the needs of women in the system. The equipment is the same for men and women. Most of the rooms for work, study, and recovery are not adapted to the specific needs of men and women.

Barrier 6. The security and defense sector is not sufficiently transparent and open to participation by civil society and women's organizations

- 21. The level of transparency of the decision-making process is functional, but the participation of external stakeholders can be enhanced.
- 22. Cooperation with civil society and the presence in the community of the security sector is generally low
- 23. Collaboration with civil society organizations concerned about gender equality can be extended.

Barrier 7. Policies in the security and defense sector are insensitive to the gender unit

- 24. The security needs of women and men are different. They have distinct priorities in the context of specific security threats. There is a tendency for women to be more affected by the destruction of social assistance structures and support systems. Lack of access to resources in times of peace tends to worsen the situation during the crisis or conflict.
- 25. Policies relevant to the security and defense sector must also be evaluated in terms of gender impact. This issue is addressed in a slight way, in terms of women's representation, and does not address the specific gender and gender inequalities and needs of the security sector.
- 26. The national legislative framework offers equal opportunities to all citizens, regardless of gender, but there are structural impediments or public attitudes that prevent the equal participation of men and women in the security and defense sector. For example, promoting women in certain positions requires long-term tour of duties for training. Long journeys are not possible for some women that are breadwinners for the family and children. Although promotion is open to the men and women who completed training, it can be a challenge for women.

Barrier 8. Limited policies to ensure equal participation in peacebuilding and peacekeeping missions

- 27. There is evidence of women absence in peace talks and in the peacebuilding process. Mostly, women's limited access to peace and negotiation processes as well as decision-making process is determined by the fact that there is no such approach to ensure the connection between presence and influence.
- 28. Women's participation in peacekeeping missions and peacekeeping operations should be encouraged. Studies show that when women account for at least 30% of the peacekeeping mission, local women are more likely to join the peace committees (Henry F. Carey. Women and peace and security: The politics of implementing gender sensitivity norms in peacekeeping. In: International Peacekeeping, vol. 8, 2001, p. 53). This contributes to increasing the credibility of peacekeeping forces, greater reporting of gender-based crimes and reducing cases of sexual exploitation and abuse by peacekeepers.

Chapter II OBJECTIVES AND EXPECTED RESULTS

- 29. As a result of a multidimensional analysis of the barriers that reduce the representation and influence of women in the security and defense sector, several solutions have been identified that would help promote women and gender equality in the security and defense sector. These solutions have been grouped according to the 8 mentioned barriers and are addressed through 8 solutions / objectives in the Implementation Action Plan of the National Program for the Implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security for the years 2018-2021 (hereinafter Action Plan).
- 30. It is an approach that will facilitate the development of ministerial action plans according to the institutional needs and capacities to ensure gender integration both from the internal perspective of the sector increasing women's representation, and from an external perspective ensuring an inclusive security and defense sector. These two perspectives are the core objectives of the Action Plan. Their implementation will contribute to the intensification of inter-ministerial cooperation with non-governmental organizations and civil society, thus ensuring the visibility of the actions taken by these institutions to implement Resolution 1325.

Objectives and identified solutions

- 31. OBJECTIVE 1: Reducing the stereotypes about the role of women in the security and defense sector aims to increase women's participation by promoting the security culture at institutional, local and national level. Enhancing the visibility of women in the sector at the national level, local awareness-raising campaigns on Local Resolutions 1325 and regular gender equality trainings will help to increase the positive perception of women's involvement in the security and defense sector and, as a consequence, increases the population's confidence in security institutions.
- 32. OBJECTIVE 2: Improving the opportunities for women and men from the system to reconcile the professional and family life will allow institutional scrutiny of opportunities to introduce flexible working hours for parents- women and men within the system as well as other measures that would offer men and women the opportunity to get more involved in family life. The actions under this program also aim to diminish the factors that generate women's mistrust in a male-dominated and unfriendly to women system.
- 33. OBJECTIVE 3: Preventing and responding to discrimination, harassment, and gender-based violence within the sector implies the development of institutional capacity in this field by developing policies, establishing internal procedures for reporting cases of sexual harassment and violence, etc., to prevent and fight discrimination. The current National Program will help to reduce the risk of discrimination and sexual harassment in the circumstances of increasing the number of women in the security and defense sector.
- 34. OBJECTIVE 4: Developing an inclusive and pro-active human resources management system will ensure the functioning of security and defense institutions based on the principles of non-discrimination and gender equality, thus contributing to the upholding women in the security and defense sector. One of the aims of this National Program will be to strengthen the transparency and integrity of the promotion system in positions.

- 35. OBJECTIVE 5: Implementing reasonable adjustment and special temporary measures in the security and defense system will allow specific actions to be taken to broaden the representation of women, including the revision of certain recruitment requirements, the adjustment of infrastructure within the sector to the needs of staff and the launch of internal mentoring and leadership programs for women.
- 36. OBJECTIVE 6: Strengthening the transparency and involvement of the civil society in the decisions taken by the security and defense system will facilitate the process of communication between institutions and civil society on gender issues in the security and defense sector. This National Program is also a viable premise to create a civil society consultation platform for institutions and to initiate partnerships with women's rights organizations. For some institutions, the principle of transparency will be applied within the limits of the legal provisions.
- 37. OBJECTIVE 7: Developing the institutional capacity for integrating gender in security and defense policies has as main objective to raise the awareness of gender policies in the sector, taking into account the different needs of women and men in the field of security and defense. The program will ensure the establishment of an internal procedure for ensuring gender integration in security and defense policies and examination of the gender-specific needs of the security and defense institutions.
- 38. OBJECTIVE 8: Supporting the participation of women in peacebuilding and peacekeeping missions responds to the obvious need to encourage, through different mechanisms, the participation of women in peace and security at regional and international level. These actions also seek to establish a program for the reintegration and rehabilitation of the military (men and women) who participated in peacekeeping missions.

Chapter III IMPLEMENTATION, REPORTING PROCEDURES, MONITORING AND EVALUATION

39. The present National Program is to be implemented by the central public administration authorities and the institutions of the security and defense sector of the Republic of Moldova mentioned in the table below. They are responsible for integrating the Action Plan provisions into annual action plans, monitoring and reporting on progress and implementation difficulties on a regular basis, and designating a person responsible for coordinating this process. For institutions that are not subordinated to the Government, this National Program is provided as a recommendation and its implementation will be carried out in coordination with the target institutions.

- 40. The security and defense sector does not only include military and law enforcement structures but also institutions responsible for certain areas of the security and defense sector as well as national security policies (Reintegration Policy Bureau, Customs Service, Security and Intelligence Service, Supreme Security Council, Ministry of Justice, State Chancellery and, last but not least, a key partner is the Ministry of Health, Labor and Social Protection) as well as those that ensure the international cooperation on the security and defense dimension, such as the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and European Integration. A special role in this context is the collaboration of the force structures with the civil society and the academic environment on the gender dimension, which would ensure the promotion of the positive image of the institutions in the sector in the society.
- 41. From the governmental perspective, the Reintegration Policy Bureau, as an integral part of the State Chancellery, is the institution responsible for coordinating the implementation of this National Program and the Action Plan.
- 42. In order to ensure an inclusive and transparent process of implementation of the National Program and Action Plan, the Reintegration Policy Bureau will create a group of implementing partners. The coordinating institutions will invite civil society organizations and development partners to identify the most effective ways to coordinate efforts and programs aimed at promoting women and gender equality in the field of security and defense. All stakeholders will be encouraged to identify the objectives of the Action Plan as well as the public institutions with which they will work in the implementation process.
- 43. The annual monitoring and evaluation will be based on the expected outcome described in the Action Plan. Each target institution will prepare the annual report based on a plan describing how the expected results included in the Annual Action Plan have been achieved. The annual progress reports will be drafted and dispatched by January 5th to the institutions responsible for generalization. The latter will systematize the information according to its objectives and will present the Reintegration Policy Bureau by January 20th. The Reintegration Policy Bureau will produce the annual sumup report by February 10th. It will be presented to the Government and will be debated at the annual meeting of implementing partners with civil society organizations and development partners.
- 44. The procedures for reporting, monitoring, and evaluating the level of implementation of the Action Plan will not involve classified information.
- 45. The mid-term review of the Action Plan will address the achieved progress at each objective level. Each objective has a representative indicator that will reveal the impact of the implementation of the initiatives / activities according to the table below.
