

Greece, Cyprus and the Crisis in the Eastern Mediterranean

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis

Bilkent University

ioannis@bilkent.edu.tr

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

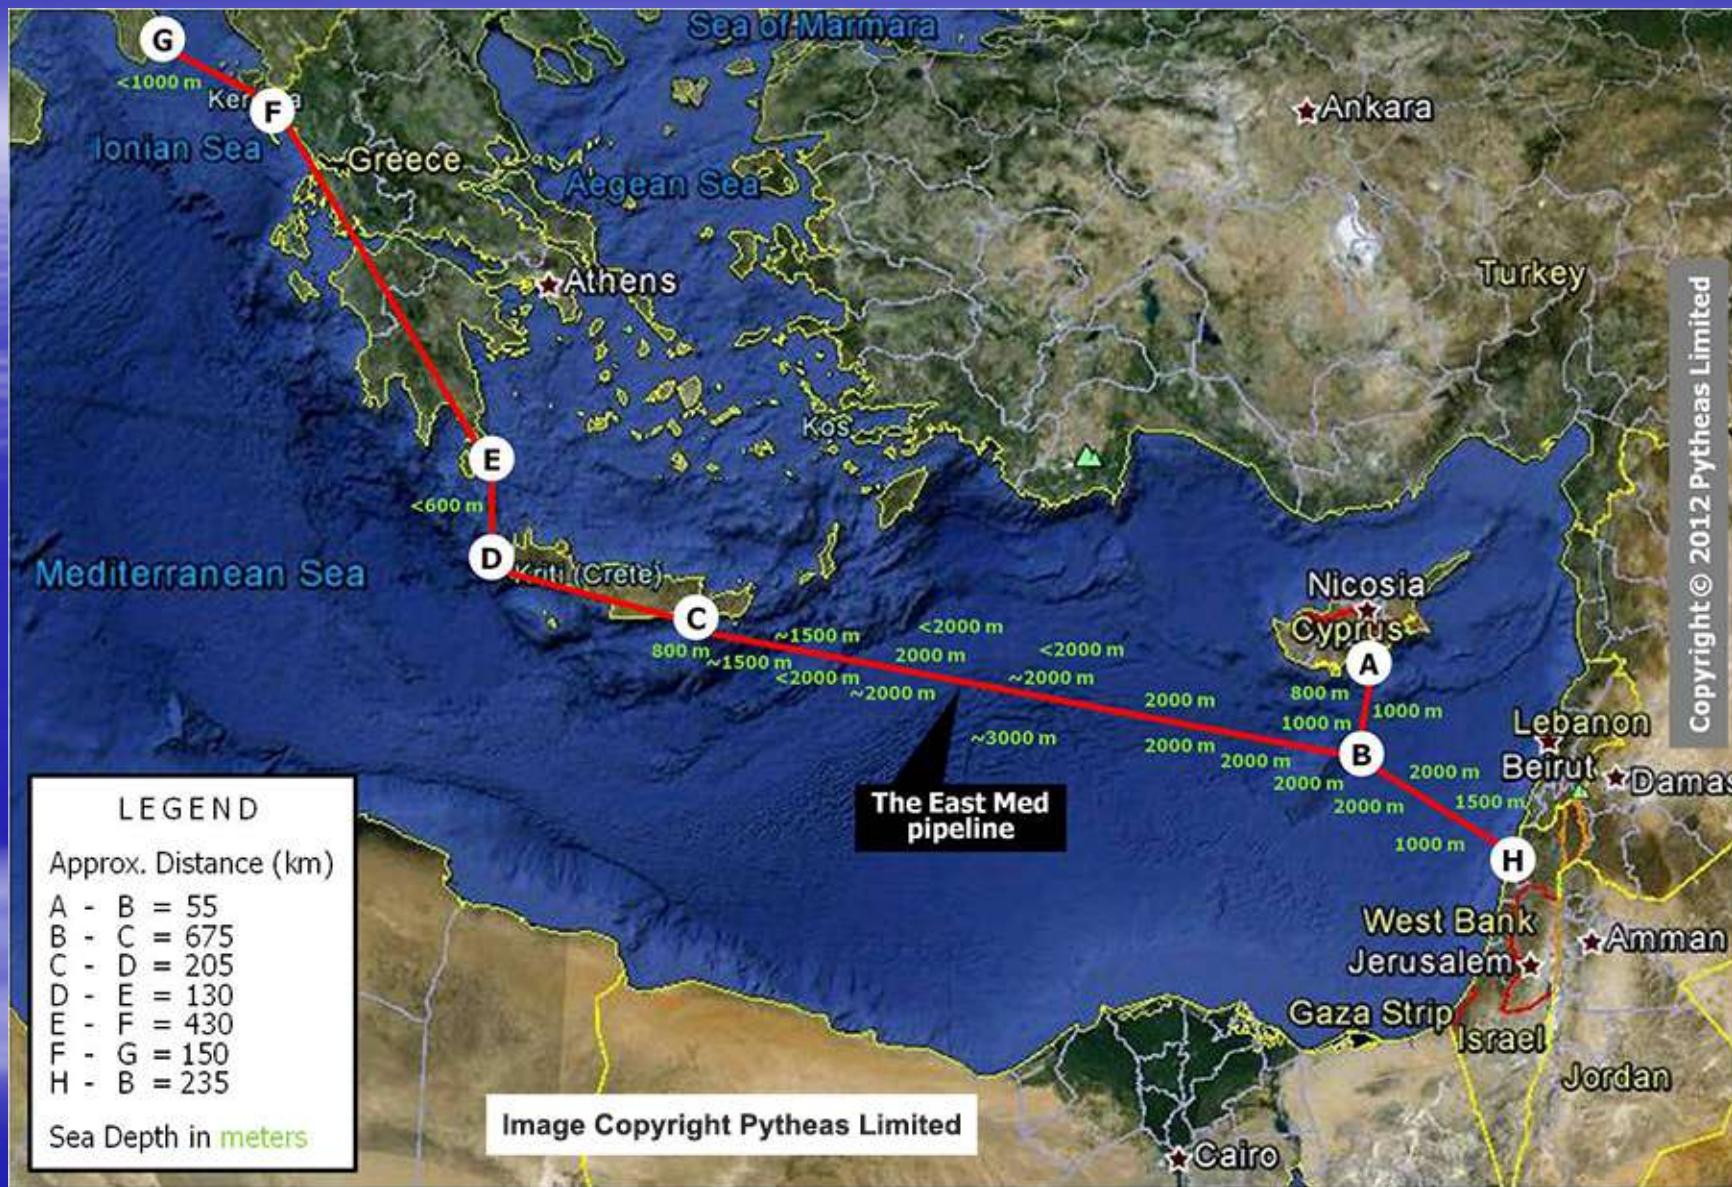

■ Main Points

- Why has the Eastern Mediterranean turned into a Conflict Zone
- Four main reasons
 - Energy
 - Cyprus
 - Libya
 - Turkey's "Blue Homeland" Project

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

■ Energy

- Recent energy discoveries have put the Eastern Mediterranean into the European energy map
- Cyprus, Egypt, Greece, Israel and Turkey got involved
- Volatility in global energy markets is likely to affect the viability of several projects
- Initial estimates may prove too optimistic;
 - Yet energy has become an additional factor in regional politics

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

■ Cyprus (I)

– Energy Monetization moves by the Republic of Cyprus

- Energy exploration
- New licenses
- Declining sentiment in energy markets
- Monetization ever more difficult

– Turkey's reaction

- Escalation and spillover towards Greece

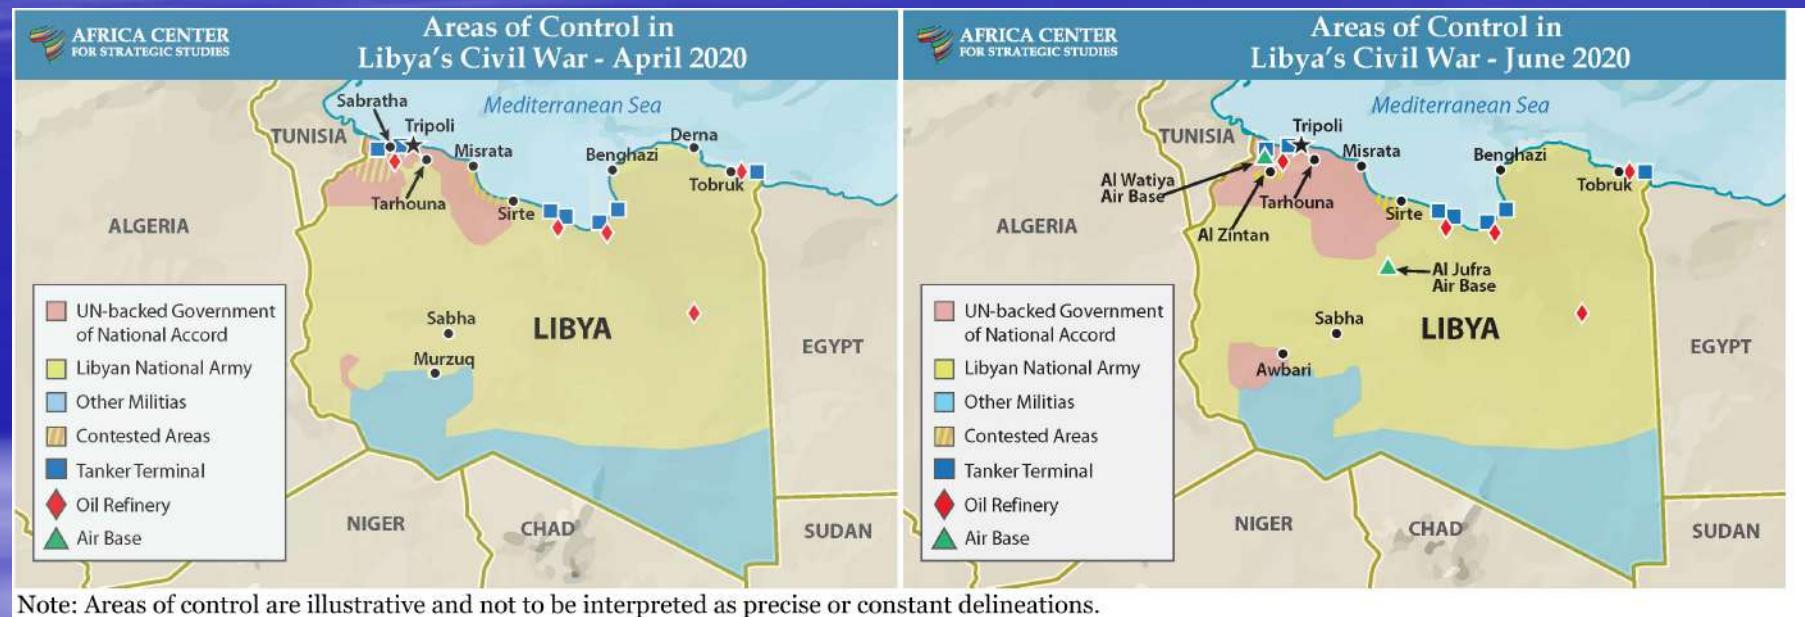

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

- Cyprus (II)
 - Turkey’s View on Cyprus Discoveries
 - The Republic of Cyprus cannot exploit energy resources, as it does not represent Turkish Cypriots
 - Yet Turkey has recognized the “Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus” in the north of the island
 - Dispatch of the exploratory vessels
 - Interruption of intercommunal negotiations

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

- Libya
 - The Arab Uprisings and the Libyan civil war
 - Strong Turkish interest
 - Business
 - Muslim Brotherhood
 - GNA vs LNA/HR
 - Turkey's clash with Egypt, the UAE and Saudi Arabia
 - Turkey's conflict with France

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

- Turkey's Involvement in Libya
 - Sponsor of the GNA side
 - Bitter enemy of LNA/HR
 - Military engagement
 - Stronger interest in the Eastern Mediterranean
 - The November 2019 memorandum of understanding
 - Its effect on Greek-Turkish relations

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

- The “Blue Homeland” and Greek-Turkish Relations
 - Delimitation of Greek-Turkish Maritime Borders
 - A long-standing dispute referring to territorial waters, continental shelf and airspace in the Aegean and the Eastern Mediterranean
 - The discovery of energy resources brought about the question of delimiting the exclusive economic zone (EEZ)

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

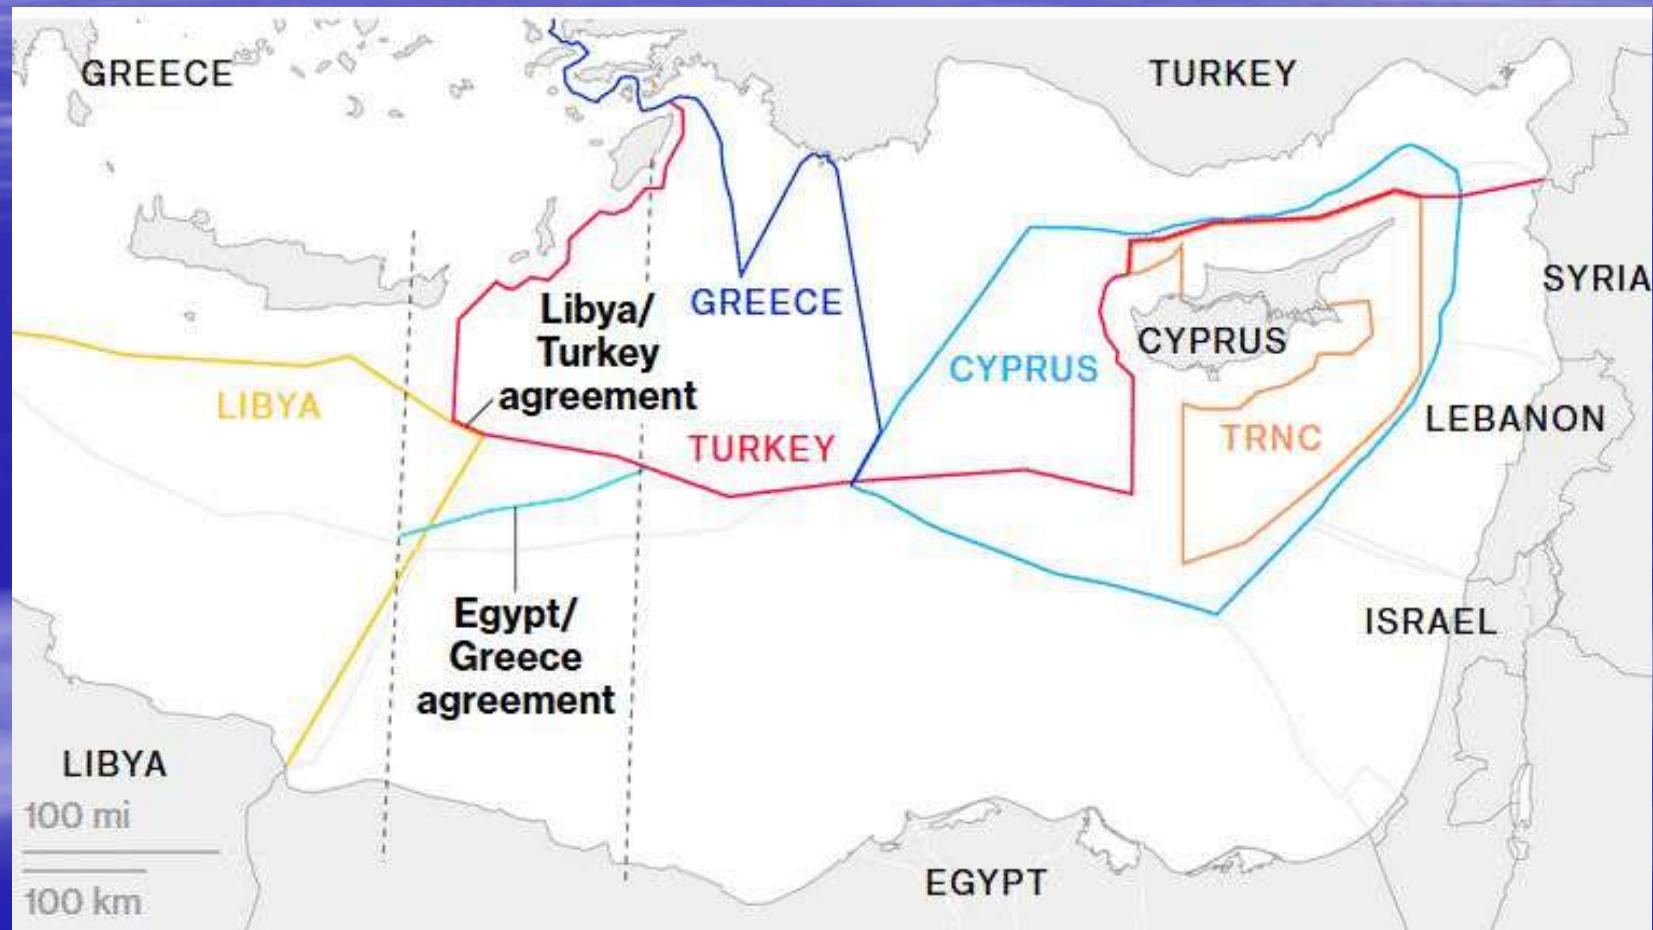

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

- Turkish Shifting Political Landscape and Foreign Policy
 - The AKP and Ulusalçılık
 - From bitter animosity to swift collaboration
 - The effect of the 15 July 2016 coup attempt
 - The “Blue Homeland” vision
 - The signature of the EEZ agreement with Libya

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

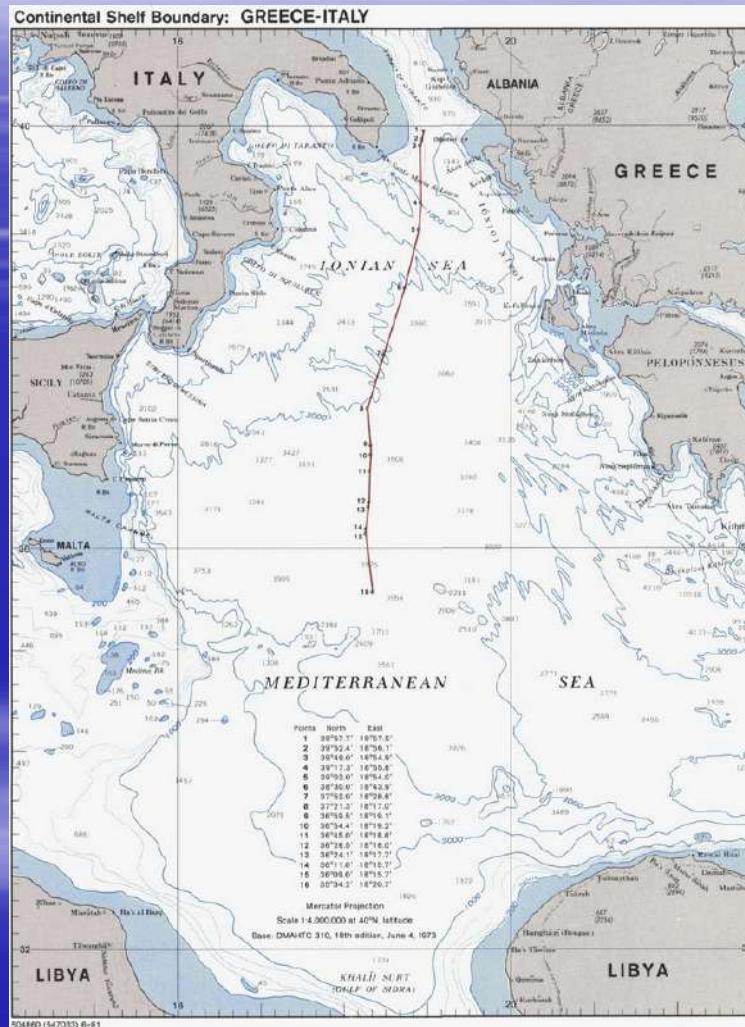

■ Greece's Response

- Signature of EEZ agreements with Italy and Egypt
- UNCLOS is applicable but flexibility shown
 - Islands given EEZ rights, but not always 100 percent

■ Turkey's Response

- The Oruç Reis vessel and exploration activities
- Military escalation and threat for an accident

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis
Bilkent University

The Eastern Mediterranean in Uncharted Waters

■ Conclusions

- Four factors have contributed to the escalation of Greek-Turkish conflict
- De-escalation should be the first step for negotiations to bring the case to ICJ
 - The ICJ has shown remarkable flexibility within the limits of UNCLOS
- Inertia is highly risky and dangerous for both countries and the region

Greece, Cyprus and the Crisis in the Eastern Mediterranean

Ioannis N. Grigoriadis

Bilkent University

ioannis@bilkent.edu.tr