Introduction

We are delighted to welcome you to the 10th Biennial Hellenic Observatory PhD Symposium on Contemporary Greece and Cyprus. Over the years, the Symposium has attracted PhD students from many different countries, facilitating their contact and collaboration with their peers. We have also been very grateful to the many academics who have given their time to chair the panels at the Symposium.

The aim of the HO Symposium is to promote the research of PhD students who have an interest in Greece and Cyprus and by presenting their work in front of experienced scholars and academics, to allow them to share and exchange ideas and to gain valuable feedback. We know from many past participants how much they have appreciated this academic opportunity. And, our 'alumni' have gone on to develop successful professional careers, not least in academia (including a number of full professors) and public life (not least, several government ministers).

Moreover, the range of themes covered on contemporary Greece and Cyprus over the years has been tremendous, offering challenging topics of wide interest. This year will be no different: we have an exciting programme and talented young scholars.

We are extremely grateful to the A.G. Leventis Foundation, for supporting the Symposium once again. The provision of travel grants to our student participants has been crucial to bringing us all together, so we can reap the benefits of our exchange.

The PhD Symposium has become one of the most important international meetings for PhD students working on contemporary Greece and Cyprus in the social sciences and we are delighted to welcome again this year students from all over the world.

European Institute, LSE*

Organiser

The Hellenic Observatory (HO) was established in 1996 with the creation of the Eleftherios Venizelos Chair of Contemporary Greek Studies in the LSE's European Institute. The role of both the Chair and the Director of the Observatory is to promote the multidisciplinary study of contemporary Greek politics, economy and society. Over the years the research remit of the Hellenic Observatory has developed to cover both Greece and Cyprus, studying them both in relation to the rest of the European Union and to Southeast Europe. Today the Hellenic Observatory is recognised as a premier research centre on contemporary Greece and Cyprus. It engages in a range of activities, including the development and support of academic and policy-related research; the organisation of conferences, seminars and workshops; the exchange of knowledge through visiting fellowships and internships; as well as teaching at the graduate level through LSE's European Institute.

The aims of the Hellenic Observatory are:

- To promote high-quality research and publications, within the social sciences, on Greece and Cyprus.
- To facilitate informed public debate on contemporary Greece and Cyprus, by serving as a lead and facilitator for the organisation of conferences, seminars and workshops.
- To foster cooperation between the relevant academic communities of Greece, the UK and beyond.
- To support and encourage a new generation of scholars with specialist knowledge and post-graduate training.

PhD Symposium

The Hellenic Observatory PhD Symposium has been organised biennially since 2003 for students pursuing social sciences research on Greece and Cyprus. The aims of the symposia are to promote the exchange of knowledge between young researchers and to offer students a first opportunity to present their work and gain valuable feedback and critiques from an international audience comprising peers and experts. Over the years the Symposium has become an established educational forum, and we are proud that many of its participants, who went on to pursue successful careers, consider their experience from the Symposium an important milestone in their development.

The PhD Symposia offer students a unique opportunity to test their ideas and findings with a wider international audience, and to establish new collaborative links across disciplines. Additionally, it enables young researchers to engage with the academic community of the LSE, and several other distinguished scholars who participate as discussants at the Symposium. The Hellenic Observatory PhD symposia are unique in their thematic focus on Greece and Cyprus which allows the exploration of research questions from several social science field perspectives. They provide an exceptional foundation for the development of innovative ideas.

Supported by

The A. G. Leventis Foundation was established in 1979 to fulfil the wishes of the late Anastasios Leventis. In Cyprus, Greece and wider south-eastern Europe, the Foundation's main emphasis has been on the restoration of a number of monuments of various periods and on support for education and culture. Elsewhere in Europe, and further afield, there has again been a concentration on education, with a particular focus on the communities of the Greek diaspora. An international programme of support for Greek studies has been developed over the years in parallel with efforts to study and enhance the presentation of Cypriot antiquities in museums around the world. The Foundation has active international programmes on environmental conservation and sustainable agriculture, with emphasis on developing countries.

Plenary Session

How to Write a PhD on Greece / Cyprus

MAR.2.08
Marshall Building (MAR), 9:30pm

Speaker:
Professor Kevin Featherstone

Kevin Featherstone is Director of the Hellenic Observatory and Professorial Research Fellow in the European Institute, LSE.

He is a political scientist specialising on Europe and Greece. He has published extensively in both areas. A recent volume, co-edited with Dimitri A. Sotiropoulos, was The Oxford Handbook of Modern Greek Politics (Oxford University Press, 2020), bringing together contributions from over 40 specialists.

In 2022 he was bestowed Honorary Greek Citizenship and in 2021 he was made 'Grand Commander, Order of the Phoenix of the Hellenic Republic' by President Sakellaropoulou, for his work on Greece. In 2020, he was awarded an honorary doctorate by the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens.

He has held visiting positions at the University of Minnesota; New York University; Harvard University; and, the European University Institute. He has supervised over 35 PhD students.

Writing a PhD is often a long and isolating journey. In this session, Professor Featherstone will draw on his extensive experience on how to better succeed in pursuing a PhD.

What are the challenges? And, the options to overcome them? What are the requirements of research design?

Keynote Lecture

The Paradox of Trust in a “Low Trust” Society. Insights from a Greek Study

Old Theatre
Old Building (OLD), 6.00pm

Speaker:
Professor Stathis Kalyvas

Stathis N. Kalyvas is Gladstone Professor of Government and fellow of All Souls College at Oxford.

Until 2018 he was Arnold Wolfers Professor of Political Science at Yale University, where he founded and directed the Program on Order, Conflict, and Violence and co-directed the Hellenic Studies Program. In 2019 he founded the T. E. Lawrence Program on Conflict and Violence at All Souls College, which he directs. He is the author, among others, of The Rise of Christian Democracy in Europe (Cornell University Press, 1996), The Logic of Violence in Civil War (Cambridge University Press, 2006), and Modern Greece: What Everyone Needs to Know (Oxford University Press, 2015). His work has received multiple awards. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences since 2008 and of the British Academy since 2020.

"Widely used measures of trust rank Greece as one of Europe's least trusting societies. Yet, when we undertook an ethnographic research project in a region of Northern Greece, we were surprised to find that individuals behaved in a way that is inconsistent with this characterization: they displayed high levels of trust in their personal interactions. The paper unpacks, explores, and explains this paradox."

Contributors

The success of the PhD Symposia would not have been possible without the invaluable contribution of the academics and researchers who have generously committed their time and offered their knowledge, expertise and skills during the reviewing process and the panel discussions. We are grateful to all the friends of the Hellenic Observatory who have worked with us and supported our efforts since the first Symposium in 2003. For the 10th Hellenic Observatory Symposium, we are especially thankful to the following friends and colleagues:

---

Othon Anastasakis is the Director of the European Studies Centre in Oxford; Director of South East European Studies at Oxford (SEESOX); Senior Research Fellow at St Antony's College and Senior Research Fellow at the Oxford School of Global and Area Studies (OSGA). He is currently the Principal Investigator of two research projects: "Greek Diaspora Project at SEESOX"; and the OX/BER funded "Migration Diplomacy and Turkey-EU relations". His latest books include Diaspora engagement in times of severe economic crisis; Greece and beyond (2022) and The Greek Military Dictatorship: Revisiting a contested past (2021).

Marilena Anastasopoulou is a Lecturer in History at Pembroke College, Faculty of History, University of Oxford, a Research Associate of South East European Studies at Oxford (SEESOX), St Antony's College, and a Postdoctoral Researcher for the Greek Diaspora Project at the School of Anthropology and Museum Ethnography (SAME), University of Oxford. Her doctoral research is a comparative – intergenerational and interregional – history of memories and identities of forced displacement that examines the multilayered relationship between contemporary attitudes and refugee past.

Theodoros Arvanitopoulos is an economist interested in energy economics, economic growth, and applied econometrics. He holds a PhD in Energy Economics from UCL, and a MSc in Economics from the University of Nottingham. Theodoros has engaged in research projects for the OECD, the European Commission, the UK Government, and the UK Climate Change Committee. He has held teaching roles at the King's Business School, and UCL.

Athanasia Chalari is currently a Senior Visiting Fellow at HO, LSE and Associate Lecturer at Open University, UK. Previously, she has worked as Head of Sociology at the University of Northampton, Lecturer at Manchester University, Post-Doctoral researcher at LSE and as Supervisor at Cambridge University. She has conducted empirical research as Visiting Researcher at Tokyo University, Toronto University and Harvard University. Her publications relate with Social Theory and the empirical study of modern Greek society, culture, change and youth identity.

Ilias Danatzis is an Assistant Professor (Lecturer) of Marketing Analytics at King's College London, UK. His main research interests revolve around services marketing, with an emphasis on networked service delivery, dysfunctional service encounters, customer misbehavior, and value creation through digital platforms. His award-winning research has been published in leading academic outlets such as the Journal of Service Research and Industrial Marketing Management. Prior to his academic career, Ilias worked as a management consultant in Germany.

Spyros Economides is Associate Professor in International Relations and European Politics at LSE and Deputy Director of the Hellenic Observatory. He was a Research Associate of the Centre for Defence Studies at King's College and at the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London. His current research concentrates on the external relations and security policies of the EU; Europeanisation and foreign policy, and the EU's relationship with the Western Balkans.

Manolis Galenianos is Professor of Economics at Royal Holloway, University of London. His research focuses on macroeconomics and labour economics. He is a member of the expert committee that advises the Greek Ministry of Labour on the minimum wage and was a co-author of the "Pissarides Report" on the Greek economy and of the collective volume "Beyond Austerity". He was previously Assistant Professor of Economics at the Pennsylvania State University and Visiting Professor at New York University, Yale University and University College London.

Kira Gartzou-Katsouyanni is a postdoctoral researcher at the LSE's Hellenic Observatory. Her research focuses on the political economy of place. She is interested in the institutional underpinnings and the political consequences of different local growth trajectories. Her work has been published in Politics & Society and Governance, and she is also a co-author of "The Greco-German Affair in the Euro Crisis: Mutual Recognition Lost?" (Palgrave Pivot, 2018). She has studied at LSE (PhD), Johns Hopkins SAIS (MA), and Oxford (BA).

Alex Georgakopoulou is Professor of Discourse Analysis & Sociolinguistics & Co-Director of the Centre for Language, Discourse & Communication, King's College London (www.kcl.ac.uk/lcdc). She has developed small stories research, a paradigm for studying identities in everyday life stories, in a range of contexts, including on social media. Her work has been translated into numerous languages, incl. Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, etc. She is the (Co)-Editor of the Routledge Research in Narrative, Interaction & Discourse Series.

Vassilis Hajivassiliou is Associate Professor in the LSE Department of Economics and an FMG Research Associate since 1996. Earned his Ph.D. from M.I.T. in 1985, supervised by the 2000 Nobel laureate Professor Daniel McFadden. Economics professor at Yale University until 1996, when he moved to the LSE. Visiting professor at Columbia, Toulouse, and Paris SciencesPo. Research focussed on theoretical, applied, and computational econometrics. Authored articles in leading econometrics journals, and chapters in the Handbooks of Econometrics and Statistics.

Panos Kanavos is Associate Professor of International Health Policy in the Department of Health Policy, LSE; Deputy Director at LSE Health and Programme Director of the Medical Technology Research Group (MTRG). He is an economist by training, and teaches health economics, pharmaceutical economics and policy, health care financing, health care negotiations, and principles of health technology assessment. He leads the activities of MTRG, a research group that concentrates on interdisciplinary and comparative policy research on medical technologies.

Maria Kaparou is an academic in the UG and PGT programmes at Southampton Education School and she currently holds the Employability Leadership role. She supervises PhD students' research within the UK and international contexts (Asia, Persian Gulf, Arab states) and she is the winner of the prestigious BELMAS Best Thesis Award 2015. Maria is researching leadership and school improvement in high-performing schools, schools in challenging contexts as well as within Multi-academy Trusts (MATs) in England.

Philipp Katsinas is an urban geographer and his work broadly focuses on the transformations of housing systems, including the social and spatial impacts of the increasing role of finance and tourism on urban economies. Philipp has held teaching roles at King's College London, Birkbeck, University of London, and Queen Mary University of London. He is part of the City Collective for the journal City.

Ploutarchos Kourtidis is a postdoctoral researcher in the Department of Psychological & Behavioural Science at the London School of Economics, currently working on an interdisciplinary project related to policy responses to health crises. He studied Psychology in Greece, and Cognitive and Decision Science in the UK. He recently obtained his PhD in Medical Decision Making from Imperial College London. Ploutarchos' research interests lie broadly in Behavioural Science, Experimental Psychology, and Judgement and Decision Making.

George Kyris is an Associate Professor at the University of Birmingham, UK. Previous affiliations include the University of Warwick, the LSE HO and the University of Manchester. His main research interests are statehood conflicts, the role of international organisations in them, and sovereignty debates, also in relation to the Cyprus conflict. He has published extensively for academic and non-academic outlets and he is the co-founder (with Vera Axyonova) of the ECPR Research Network on Statehood, Sovereignty and Conflict.

Stella Ladi is a Reader at Queen Mary University of London and an Associate Professor at Panteion University in Athens. She is research fellow at the Hellenic Foundation for European and Foreign Policy (ELIAMEP) and Research Associate at the Hellenic Observatory, LSE. Her research interests include crisis management, the Eurozone crisis, public policy and public administration reforms, Europeanization, global public policy and transnational administration and the role of experts in public policy.

Konstantina Maragkou is a Contemporary Historian with research interests in political and diplomatic aspects of the Cold War. Following studies at Cambridge University, she has held academic appointments at LSE, NYU, Yale, and Newcastle Universities. Her first book examined British relations with the Greek Colonels, and she currently works on her second monograph that investigates the impact of the anti-Colonels' campaigns on the international Human Rights regime. Following the unearthing of a private archive, she has also started a project on the evolution of female activism on human rights and environmental issues.

George Melios is an applied economist working as a Research Fellow at the Department of Psychological & Behavioural Science at the London School of Economics. ## Nicos Mouzelis Award for Best Paper

The Nicos Mouzelis Award for Best Paper was inaugurated in 2017 at the 8th Hellenic Observatory PhD Symposium. The Award was established in recognition of Professor Mouzelis' contribution to the education and development of young researchers and to the study of contemporary Greece.

Professor Nicos Mouzelis has long established links with the Hellenic Observatory and was one of its founding members. During the 90's he campaigned along with other LSE academics for the establishment of an LSE research unit that would devote itself to the furtherment of research on Greek political, social, and economic issues and the promotion of international academic collaborations. The Hellenic Observatory was established as a result of these efforts and Professor Nicos Mouzelis served as a member of its Advisory Board until 2015 contributing invaluable to its development as a premier research centre on contemporary Greece and Cyprus.

Today, Nicos Mouzelis is Emeritus Professor of Sociology at LSE and continues to write and publish, adding to his already rich record of contributions to the fields of sociology, sociology of organizations, sociology of development and social theory (visit mouzelis.gr for a full list of publications). Professor Mouzelis remains a close friend and supporter of the Hellenic Observatory. The Nicos Mouzelis Award for Best Paper is offered to one of the PhD students presenting at the Symposium in recognition of outstanding research potential, and in honour of Professor Mouzelis' long standing academic contribution and support of the Hellenic Observatory.
