

Your Community

Every university community needs to start talking about consent, sex, gender, sexual harassment and relationships.

As a School, we are committed to working together to end sexual violence, bullying, harassment and hate crime. Together, we are continuing to develop a community that is diverse, equitable and truly inclusive

That's why LSE is proud to be working with The Consent Collective to start conversations about these important issues.

Consent Collective

Click the image for a 2 min video How do you know if you have consent?

You can access these in 3 easy steps:

- 1. Visit consentcollective.com/lse
- 2. Click 'Sign In' on the top right
- 3. Use your LSE email address to access over 60 innovative resources to support you

Your Studies

Graduates who are able to enter the workforce with the knowledge and interpersonal skills that help them navigate professional relationships are likely to be more employable than those who do not.

The resources are there to help you acquire this learning so that they can do the work of practicing these skills.

Consent, safeguarding, sexual harassment and your future career: Full lecture

Look out for details of a live Guest Lecture featuring Consent Collective and LSE academics discussing 'Me Too, activism and your career'

Your Wellbeing

LSE Safe Contacts are members of LSE staff who have received training and can offer a confidential 'signposting' service for students and staff who have previously or are currently experiencing some form of bullying or harassment.

Your Study

Consent is a topic that can be linked to many different academic topics – the following videos can be linked to your study:

Law and Criminology

Consent and your future career in Justice

The failure of criminal justice systems when it comes to rape. Are we asking the right questions?

Management

Consent and your future career in Business

Education

Consent and your future career in Education

Health policy

Consent and your future career in health and wellbeing