

ENVIRONMENT X WOMEN'S HEALTH WORKSHOP

Call for participants now open

Deadline 15th July 2020

Visit exwh.org/london for more info

Women in the Global South are disproportionately negatively impacted by environmental threats & climate change. Women who are already in marginalised positions are particularly vulnerable, especially those who are impoverished, indigenous, or who live in rural areas. For many women in these contexts, environmental adversity is an embodied experience.

This one-day multidisciplinary, multi-sector workshop will draw on expertise within demography, psychology, sociology, epidemiology, population health & beyond to explore environmental effects on maternal, reproductive & mental health, showcasing new research, facilitating knowledge exchange & discussing potential community based solutions.

LSE, London
4th September 2020
With support from

E · S · R · C
ECONOMIC & SOCIAL RESEARCH COUNCIL

British Society for Population
Studies

LSE Global Health
Initiative

