The Universidad Panamericana International Programme at LSE studies worldwide global issues and societies' challenges. It offers lectures across various disciplines, including economics, politics, sociology, and anthropology, all delivered by LSE lecturers and researchers. The lectures aim to explore how global issues impact different societies and cultures.

This programme is specifically designed to aid students in developing a comprehensive understanding of global challenges, such as poverty, environmental degradation, and political instability. Its primary goal is to equip students with the necessary tools to analyse and evaluate these challenges, ultimately enabling them to propose solutions that can effectively address them. The International Programme emphasises global issues, interdisciplinary learning, and critical thinking. These aspects are crucial for understanding complex global challenges and finding viable and impactful solutions.
