

Participant Code of Conduct

By signing up for a study, you are agreeing to abide by this code of conduct. Participants who violate this code may not be invited to participate in future studies.

Being on time

If you are not ready at your assigned time you will not be able to participate. Please aim to arrive 5 minutes early as it may take you a few minutes to find the lab, and the study may begin at the exact stated time. Each study is unique and you may not be able to join the study later or at another timeslot. Each researcher has the right to refuse participation to their study if the participant is not on time.

Remembering your lab ID code

This is not your student ID! The ID code can be found in your confirmation email when you sign up for a study. Participants are entitled to anonymity and researchers will only have access to your participant ID code, not your name. Your attendance can only be marked by using your ID code.

Taking participation seriously

Please remember that this is someone's research. The studies you are paid to participate in will have taken time and effort to organise, plus the costs of your payment. Their research will depend on the data you provide by your participation. You should not use your phone whilst taking part in a study, or access any computer applications other than those you have been instructed to use.

Notifying us when you need to cancel

If you do not show up for your assigned timeslot and have not informed us, you will be marked as an 'unexcused no-show'. This will automatically prevent you from signing up for any further studies. If you need to cancel, please do this through the sign-up system (up to 24hrs before your session), by emailing the researcher, or by calling or emailing the lab.

Respecting people and equipment

Participants should treat the BRL facilities including furniture and equipment, with respect. Behaviour that is offensive, disruptive or dangerous to other participants, researchers and staff is unacceptable and may result in not receiving participant payment or being prevented from signing up for any further studies.

Agreeing to LSE's IT Terms and Conditions

Participation in any computer-based study is subject to the terms and conditions of LSE Information Management and Technology. These can be found here:
