Key to Schedule

Teaching Sessions

Preparatory readings and videos	You should try to read any assigned preparatory readings and view any associated pre-recorded videos before the week starts as there is little time to catch up during the week itself.
---------------------------------	--

Lectures	Sandra Sequeira will deliver the lectures on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday morning (microeconomics). Charlie Bean then takes over for Wednesday afternoon, Thursday and Friday (macroeconomics). During some of these sessions, you will work in assigned groups when directed by the lecturers to discuss case studies. We will allocate study groups in advance of the teaching week. Please come prepared to discuss the questions listed in the case study during the main lectures and/or group discussions. Each study group will have to nominate one person in advance to present their findings if called upon.
----------	--

Optional Sessions

Welcome drinks	On Monday you're invited to attend a welcome drinks reception. You will be joined by second year students who are on campus for the Development Economics module.
----------------	---

Insight Event	In this Insight session, EMPA student Monika Heyder will talk about her work in the city network ICLEI and on how they use standardization to advocate for sustainable development.
---------------	---

LSE Growth Co-Lab and EMPA/EMPP student engagement	In this session, researchers from the LSE Growth Co-Lab will present some of their research and projects in the Growth Co-Lab and how you can get involved in them.
