Media

I have appeared regularly in both broadcast and print media. My television appearances include all the major news bulletins, and Newsnight, Panorama, World in Action, and Right to Reply. I have worked with several independent production companies and was series consultant on Crime and Punishment, three programmes broadcast on ITV in May-June 1996. My radio appearances include the Today Programme, the PM Programme, File on Four, World at One, Face the Facts, You and Yours, Science Now, Any Answers, Crime Desk, After Hours, Thinking Allowed and many pieces on other programmes on Radios 4 and 5, GLR, IRN, World Service and local radio. My research has been reported regularly in all the national broadsheet and tabloid papers. In addition I write regularly for non-academic publications and have had journalism published in The Times, The Guardian and The Independent and on the BBC's website. The innovative Reading the Riots research study, conducted jointly with The Guardian, broke new ground, utilising a partnership between a national newspaper and a leading university to conduct high quality social research fully in the public eye. The initial results were published over six days, beginning 5th December 2011, and totalled 21 full pages of coverage. The second phase was published over three days, beginning 2nd July, and totalled 13 pages of coverage. BBC2's Newsnight devoted whole programmes on both launch days, and in August 2012 the BBC also aired a drama documentary, The Riots: In their own words, based on the study.
