

Latin America and Caribbean Centre

Created in 2016, the Centre is the focal point for LSE's research and public engagement with Latin America and the Caribbean - Our mission is to make a difference to people's lives in the region.

Linked with departments of Geography & Environment, and International Development, we work across the LSE.

Conduct excellent research that makes a difference (impact); develop partnerships with research, government and civil society in region, enhance understanding of issues relevant to the region at LSE, enriching student experience and outreach.

Centre consists 10 Research Officers, 2 Professors in Practice, 20 Visiting Fellows, 48 Associate Academics, plus a professional services team.

Watch Again Clare Wenham discusses the need for gender mainstreaming in global health security

Research Dr Ulises Tabarez investigates the urban exclusion of Mexican Afro-Indigenous communities

Watch Co-produced Navigating Borderlands animation on Colombian women's experiences of migrating to Chile

Watch Again Breaking the Inequality Mould in Latin America

Research Dr Chandra Morrison and colleagues explore how sensorial methods enhance research on urban violence

The COVID-19 portal Shaping responses to the coronavirus pandemic

THE LONDON SCHOOL
OF ECONOMICS AND
POLITICAL SCIENCE ■

Latin America and
Caribbean Centre

Inequalities and Citizenship

- Migrants and rights
- Race and social activism
- Women, indigenous groups and youth

Violence, Security and Peace

- Community participation
- Policing and security
- Peace building

Entrepreneurship

- Social entrepreneurship
- Innovation
- Work and skills

Trade and Foreign Policy

- UK-Latam trade
- Competitiveness
- Risk and regulation

Urban Political Economy

- Public Policy
- Health policies
- Infrastructure and Mobilities

Energy and Environment

- Energy sector reform
- Low-carbon transition
- Green finance

The Future of UK-Latin American and Caribbean Trade After Brexit

Speakers:

Joanna Crellin | @JoannaCrellin
Dr Christine Cote | @LSEManagement
Dr Jan Kleinheisterkamp | @LSELaw
Prof Francisco Panizza |
@LSEGovernment

Chair:

Dr Stephen Woolcock | @LSEIRDept

Co-hosted with:

@TheBPFG
@britexpertise

THE LONDON SCHOOL
OF ECONOMICS AND
POLITICAL SCIENCE ■

Latin America and Caribbean Centre

The Blog:

Uses expert, evidence-based analysis to increase awareness and understanding of Latin America and the Caribbean.

Is published in English, Spanish & Portuguese

blogs.lse.ac.uk/latamcaribbean/

Thematic coverage

- Broad and multidisciplinary (governance, economics, international affairs, politics, culture, and society).

Geographical coverage

- From Mexico and Bermuda to Tierra del Fuego, including all of the independent states and overseas dependencies, as well as their diasporas.

Reach

- Worldwide readership, with over 400,000 reads last year.
- Republished, cited, and recommended by leading media outlets, including Forbes, Newsweek, El Financiero, Televisa, and the IMF.

LSE Latin America and Caribbean

Expert analysis of the region's politics, economics, and societies

Latest posts

Corruption in Costa Rica: could the Cochinilla Case be a sign of progress? ★

JULY 13TH, 2021

Political economy

Latin America and
Caribbean Centre

Blog roundup by email:

Email address

Subscribe

LSE Latin America an...
4,348 likes

Political economy

Political economy

Political economy

Rodrigo Aguilera

June 10th, 2021

Mexico's 2021 mid-term elections: more Morena and glimmers of hope for AMLO's opponents in 2024

0 comments | 18 shares

Estimated reading time: 5 minutes

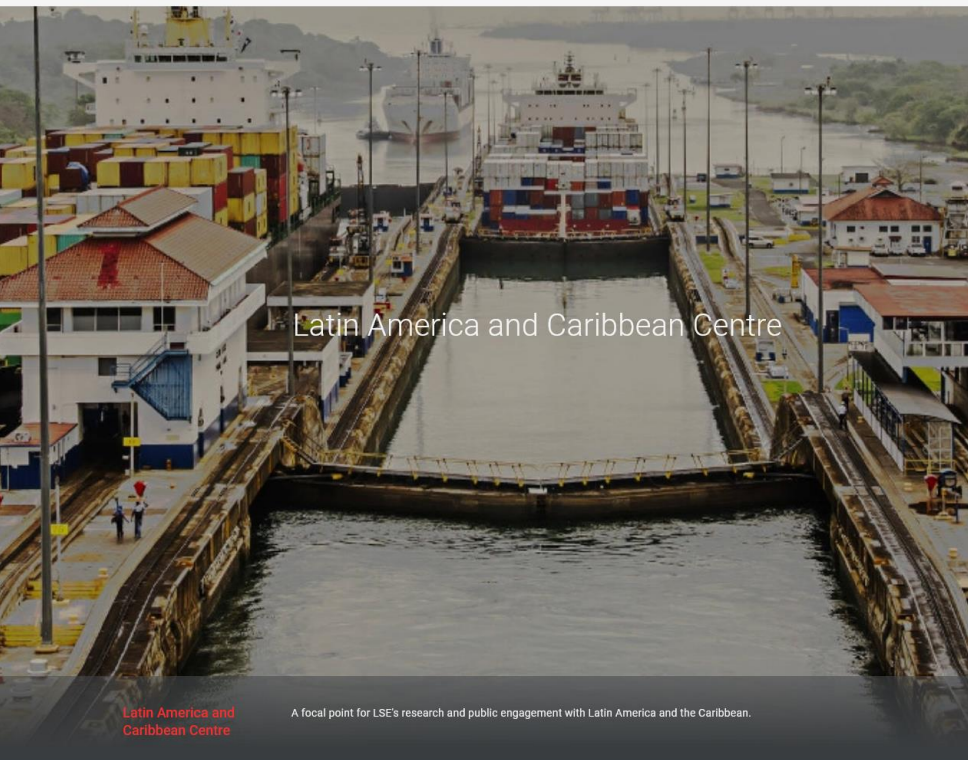

18

Mexico's recent mid-term elections were widely seen as a referendum on the country's polarising president, Andrés Manuel López Obrador, and his National Regeneration Movement party (Morena). The opposition PAN-PRI-PRD coalition made important gains in the Chamber of Deputies, but the same parties were roundly beaten by Morena in a number of state governor races. Though this means that Morena will go into the 2024 election as a consolidated, nationwide political force, these results do also offer glimmers of hope for the opposition, writes Rodrigo Aguilera.

Though official legislative results have not yet been announced, Morena and its allies look set to lose around 50 seats in the 500-seat Chamber of Deputies, effectively robbing them of their 334-

Latin America and
Caribbean Centre

- Website - www.lse.ac.uk/lacc
- Blog - <https://blogs.lse.ac.uk/latamcaribbean/>
- Social Media –

@LSE_LACC

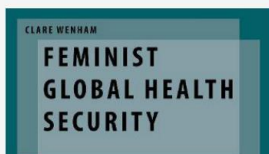

@LSE_LACC

@LSELACC

lse-lacc

Watch Again Clare Wenham discusses the need for gender mainstreaming in global health security

Research Dr Ulises Tabarez investigates the urban exclusion of Mexican Afro-Indigenous communities

Watch Co-produced Navigating Borderlands animation on Colombian women's experiences of migrating to Chile

Watch Again Breaking the Inequality Mould in Latin America

Research Dr Chandra Morrison and colleagues explore how sensorial methods enhance research on urban violence

The COVID-19 portal Shaping responses to the coronavirus pandemic