IR2083 International political theory

General information

MODULE LEVEL: 5
CREDIT: 30
NOTIONAL STUDY TIME: 300 hours

Summary
This course develops, extends and deepens theoretical topics covered in IR1011 Introduction to international relations, as well as introducing students to a range of new texts, theories and concepts. International political theory is about different ways in which the nature of international politics may be explained, understood and judged. As a topic it is focused on theoretical texts and concepts (rather than empirical, historical material).

Conditions
Prerequisite: If taken as part of a BSc degree, the following course(s) must be passed before this course may be attempted.
- IR1011 Introduction to international relations.

Aims and objectives
The aims and objectives of the course are to:

- give an account of different frameworks of thinking about international politics
- acquaint students with ideas, concepts and texts in international political theory, both classical and modern, in their historical context
- introduce students to issues of methodology in the study of international politics
- enable students to think critically about alternative ways of explaining, understanding and judging international politics in the early 21st century.

Learning outcomes
At the end of this course and having completed the essential reading and activities students should be able to:

- demonstrate knowledge of different frameworks for thinking about international politics
- demonstrate knowledge of a range of ideas, concepts and texts in international political theory and the historical contexts in which they arose
- distinguish and evaluate different methodological approaches within the study of international politics
